HOCKING BURDEN FALLS ON CRISS

Stock Exchange Report Holds Him Responsible for All Purchases Unpaid For.

NO BLAME FOR POOL'S WORK

Specialist Censured for Offensive Language—Six Firms Condemned for Carrying Pool Accounts.

The Stock Exchange authorities made public yesterday the report of the Special Committee of Five which has been investigating for two weeks the collapse of the Columbus & Hocking Coal and Iron pool on Jan. 19, and the Governing Committee is expected to act on the facts presented at its regular meeting to-day, when it is scheduled to take up also the reports of the Committee on Insolvencies on the failures of Lathrop, Haskins & Co. and J. M. Fiske & Co., both carried down by the smash in Hocking.

Contrary to expectation, when the investigation started there was nothing in the report to indicate that expulsion of any one was intended. In fact, the report was chiefly given up to a discussion of the facts surrounding the dispute of Hugh F. Criss, the specialist in Hocking, with the several participants in the pool who refused to accept deliveries of stock bought by him in their names in the slump.

Firms Absolved of "Welching."

The specialist's contentions are disallowed by the committee, and the firms which he accused of "welching" are vindicated for their stand. Mr. Criss, besides being held "responsible for his firm to all sellers for all purchases which have not been accepted and paid for by others," is condemned for the use of "offensive language" in connection with his charges of bad faith. No censure of the pool itself is contained in the report, and of Lathrop, Haskins & Co. and J. M. Fiske & Co., the two firms most deeply in the pool, and the two which first failed, carrying down with them Roberts, Hall & Criss, the specialist's firm, the report simply says: "A task was undertaken beyond their means, resulting in their failure."

In its final analysis the censure of the report is limited to Mr. Criss's language, and to such members of the two pools as carried stock in the pool for the account of Latnrop, Haskins & Co., "thereby practically lending their names to this undertaking." These "also merit severe condemnation," the report says. What form that condemnation may take lies with the Governing Committee to determine. The constitution gives this body such wide powers that it may mete out punishment under a choice of several different heads, ranging from "acts detrimental to the welfare of the Exchange" to "reckless trading," for which the penalties vary from reprimand to suspension for varying periods.

Starting out with the consideration of the two pools in Hocking, their membership and scope, the report is a concise history of the whole Hocking affair. The Exchange never before in its history has been so frank in taking the public into its confidence. Even after the investigation of the A. O. Brown manipulation in 1908, when the Street first began to see interference coming from the Legislature, no such complete laying bare of facts was made.

The secret point with Stock Exchange members in the whole Hocking scandal, after the facts as to the aims of the pool itself had become better understood, and it was known that there was little to be condemned in the attempt to accumulate a big block of the company's stock, has been the charges of bad faith between members, and it is to this that the report plays the most attention.

The report is framed in sections, each taking up and disposing of by itself the various phases of the investigation. By far the longest section is that devoted to what happened on the day of the slump. Here is the report:

Text of the Report.

"To the Governing Committee:

"Gentlemen: The special committee appointed Jan. 26, 1910, to investigate transactions in Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company stock between members of the Exchange and Lathrop, Haskins & Co., J. M. Fiske & Co., and Roberts, Hall & Criss, submits the following report:

"As a result of meetings of the special committee, held every day, at each of which all parties in interest were present, including many partners of members, with opportunity for each party to present as many witnesses as were desired, but always in the presence of the opposing interest, the following seem to be the facts elicited:

"On Jan. 18, 1910, there were in existence two pools in Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron stock, both under the management of James R. Keene. The subscribers to Pool No. 1 were:

"It appears that Lathrop, Haskins & Co. had subscribed in their own name and through other brokers for 9,000 shares, out of a total subscription of 20,000 shares.

"On the morning of Jan. 19, 1910, there remained unbought, on account of the total amount subscribed for: Pool No. 1, not yet bought, 2,600 shares. Pool No. 2, not yet bought, 3,100 shares, leaving what they called a 'buying power' of 5,100 shares. According to the pool agreement, each subscriber was to carry stock in his own office up to the amount of his pool subscription, as allotted to him by the pool manager, James R. Keene.

"The orders to buy or sell, were given out by Lathrop, Haskins & Co. after conferring with Mr. Keene, Lathrop, Haskins & Co. would pay for all purchases, and shortly thereafter Mr. Keene would order the division of the stock among the subscribers, each one receiving his share, to be carried for account of the pool, on written orders from Mr. Keene. Up to Jan. 19 no pool subscriber had yet received the full amount of stock he had agreed to carry for the pool.

SAVED FROM AN ICE CAKE.

Despondent Man Climbed Onto It After Deciding Not to Die.

Huddled on a cake of ice, which, driven by the wind and tide, carried him swiftly along the Hudson River, a man who said he was Herbert C. Jackson of Denver was rescued last night by a tugboat crew as he was about to lose consciousness from exposure. Jackson had tried to end his life about an hour before and had jumped into the river at the foot of West 120th Street. But the sudden chill of the water drove the thought of suicide from his mind and he struggled hard to get back to shore.

He climbed onto an ice cake floating by and began to shout for help. But there was no one in hearing distance along that part of the Manhattan shore. In a few minutes Jackson was being borne southward and out toward the middle of the river. He had drifted to a point opposite 100th Street and had shouted himself hoarse. The chill from the water, too, had weakened him, and he was shivering so it was hard to retain his perch on the ice cake.

But suddenly Jackson heard the sound of an approaching tugboat, and through the gloom he could make out the boat's lights coming nearer. Summoning all his energy he yelled again as loud as he could. The cry for help was heard by Capt. Aaron Reyea of the tugboat G. W. Decker.

Although he could not see Jackson, the tugboat Captain signaled his engineer to reverse. The tugboat came to a stop, and as the crew crowded forward to see what was the matter the ice cake, bearing Jackson, drifted alongside. They pulled him on board and carried him to the engine room. The tugboat headed for the pier at the foot of Ninety-seventh Street. Several officers attached to the Naval Reserve training ship Granite State were on the pier. They sent in a call to the J. Hood Wright Hospital, and while waiting for an ambulance wrapped Jackson in blankets. His teeth were chattering so that he could not talk. But later at the hospital he was able to tell a little about himself.

Jackson said that he was a painter, 21 years old, and used to live at 2,288 South Milwaukee Street, Denver, Col. He said that he came here two weeks ago, expecting to get employment readily. But his efforts to get work failed. Hungry and tired he wandered yesterday along Riverside Drive looking out on the Hudson. When he came to 120th Street after dark he was seized, he said, with an impulse to end his troubles and plunged in. Jackson is detained at the hospital as a prisoner charged with attempting suicide.

COOK YARN FROM BERMUDA.

But the Doctor, Bearded or Otherwise, Is Not There—Jest on His Friend.

Interest in the missing Dr. Frederick Cook was revived yesterday by a report that he had been seen in Bermuda by G. J. L. Doerschuck, a brewer, of 991 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, who arrived from the island yesterday by the Royal Mail packet Orotava. The report had it that Mr. Doerschuck, who took a leading part in the reception of Dr. Cook on his arrival from Copenhagen, met him in the woods outside Hamilton, in Bermuda, wearing a beard; again, that the doctor admitted his identity, and said he had been resting up there before coming back to New York to face his detractors, and that he was going to sail for Halifax to-day on the Sobo.

Katsuma Wymats, a Japanese passenger on the Orotava, was alleged to have been present at the conversation between Mr. Doerschuck and Dr. Cook in the woods. After the story had been printed in an evening newspaper to the extent of a column a small army of reporters and photographers were put on the trail of the two men. Mr. Doerschuck was not at home, and had not returned late last night.

Katsuma Wymats, said to be a civil engineer at 60 Wall Street, could not be found at that address, but was discovered in Bayonne, N. J., working as a valet to Dr. Lucius Donohoe, at 140 West Eighth Street. He admitted that a man on the ship told him he had seen Dr. Cook, but did not know the man's name.

After the reporters had been sitting on the stoop of the house at 991 Bushwick Avenue for four hours H. R. Doerschuck, son of the brewer, informed them that the whole story had been a joke perpetrated on his father, who still believed in Dr. Cook and had been his friend for many years.

If Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the arctic explorer, will call at the check room of the Waldorf-Astoria, a large bundle which he evidently overlooked at the time of his hurried departure from the hotel to the Gramatan Inn, Bronxville, will be returned to him.

The bundle was checked several months ago by Dr. Cook in his sojourn at the hotel, immediately following his lecture tour. It was not until yesterday that attention was called to the bundle by the attendant in charge of the check room, who reported the matter to the management. The man in charge had his curiosity aroused by the odor which emanated from inside the paper wrapping.

When this wrapping was removed yesterday before the bundle was identified as belonging to Dr. Cook, the inside covering was found to be the skin of some arctic animal, thought to be a musk ox. This led to the final identification of the owner of the bundle.

What is contained inside the covering of fur will probably stay unknown until Dr. Cook presents his check and reveals the contents.

The bundle is some ten feet long and is well wrapped with twine. Here and there, where the skin of the musk ox overlaps, the ragged ends of what appears to be the fur of a white polar bear protrude. The bundle is believed to be entirely composed of skins from the arctic.

GIVE PEARY $10,000; HE GIVES IT AWAY

New York's Present to Explorer at Once Devoted by Him to a South Pole Quest.

BIG OPERA HOUSE TRIBUTE

Governor Lauds Commander and Thousands Shake His Hand—Geographic Society Accepts His Offered Ship.

One of the most remarkable testimonials ever given to a citizen of the United States was received by Commander Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the north pole, last night at the Metropolitan Opera House. The testimonial was national in its character, President Taft indorsing the occasion with a long message of congratulation and Gov. Hughes acting as presiding officer. Toward the close there was handed to Commander Peary a purse of $10,000, the amount being contributed by thirty-one prominent citizens of New York. As soon as Commander Peary had received the gift, he announced that he would deposit it in a bank as a joint contribution to fit out an expedition to go in search of the south pole.

In the course of the proceedings the explorer heard that the National Geographic Society in Washington had announced its acceptance of his proposal made the other day on behalf of the Peary Arctic Club, to contribute the arctic steamer Roosevelt in which he went to the north pole if the Board of Managers of the society would contribute $50,000 toward the expedition. From the platform he announced that he would be willing to direct such an expedition to the south pole if the United States, through Congress, would take a hand.

There have been more brilliant assemblages at the famous opera house, but seldom any that were more enthusiastic. The crowd completely filled the house, and every reference to Commander Peary was the occasion of a prolonged boisterous outburst of applause.

When Gov. Hughes, who sat beside Commander Peary on the platform, surrounded by most of the members of the crew which accompanied the explorer on the voyage north and the thirty-one members of the committee, finished his enthusiastic indorsement of the explorer's achievement, Commander Peary gave a vivid description of his journey, illustrated by stereopticon views. The Commander added little to what has already been told and written of his successful achievement, but he was cheered again and again.

The only reference throughout the evening that was made to Dr. Cook was when Gov. Hughes, in explaining that circumstances had delayed the giving of the present testimonial, said that these circumstances "were not within our control." The audience laughed and cheered at that and Peary nodded and smiled.

Hughes Lauds Peary.

Gov. Hughes said in part:

"We are here to-night to extend the greetings and congratulations of his fellow-countrymen to a great American hero. [Applause.] We desire to express our intense gratification that an American, backed by American enterprise, has attained the object of the quest of centuries, and that the flag of the Nation has been placed at the north pole. [Applause.]

"We wish to do honor to one who has bravely won an apparently impossible victory. Circumstances have delayed this testimonial, but we may plead in extenuation that the circumstances have not been within our control. [Laughter and applause.] and we should make our greeting all the more hearty because, unfortunately, it has been so long delayed.

"I have no sympathy with those who inquire of what utility may be the discovery of the north pole, or a visit to those frozen regions. When the time comes that knowledge will not be sought for its own sake, and men will not press forward simply in a desire of achievement without hope of gain, to extend the limits of human knowledge and information; then, indeed, will the race enter upon its decadence. [Applause.] All that we have to-day by way of material benefits, and all the blessings of our richly favored civilization, are due to those noble souls who in their first endeavor were unable to see aught of gain, but pressed forward because of the uncon-querable ambition of manhood to achieve.

"There have been no men in all the race of men who have more finely exhibited the capacity of manhood in its splendid power of endurance, in its talent for organization, in its self-control, in its ability to hold its own in a period of years to the pursuit of a goal, than has been exhibited in this long line of distinguished explorers, of whom to-night we greet the chief and the most successful. [Applause.]

The Peer of All Explorers.

"He has endured. None can read the records of his earlier expeditions without realizing the extent to which he has been inured to hardship and to suffering. He stands the peer of all that fine company of discoverers and explorers who have made possible to us the knowledge of the world. But he has had more than that. He planned a route. This has not been the result of a sudden impulse or of a fortunate combination of circumstances. This is the result of planning, of organization, and of study which would do credit to any Captain of organized industry, and is none the less worthy of praise because we find these qualities exhibited in a man of established bravery and proved merit to the limits of all examples known of men. We are all, in whatever vocation we may be engaged, better to-night and more richly endowed because of the achievements of Commander Peary. [Applause.]

"We greet him to-night as having succeeded after nearly a quarter of a century of effort. Through all this period this man has had but one idea, and that idea he has devoted his life to. He has had but one object, and that he has followed without regard to his own fortune, his own health, or his own future. He is before you to-night a devotee, a zealot, a man who has accomplished that which hitherto has seemed impossible of accomplishment because his life has been devoted to the attainment of that goal. All hail to the man who puts his life to a worthy purpose and wins!" [Applause.]

Capt. Bartlett's Tribute.

Following Gov. Hughes, Percy MacKaye read an original poem, called "To the Commander and His Men." Gov. Hughes also introduced one by one the men who were present who made up the crew of the Roosevelt. Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, next to Commander Peary, came in for the most applause. The Captain told of his work under Commander Peary on many expeditions, and when he said that he knew that Peary was going to reach the pole some day the house rose to its feet and cheered.

When the Commander got up to begin his lecture every one in the audience stood up while the band played "Hail to the Chief." Messages of congratulation were read from Gov. Fernald of Maine,

ROOSEVELT FOR TAFT AGAIN, SAYS STEWART

NOT A CANDIDATE FOR 1912

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—With the consent and approval of Col. Roosevelt, John A. Stewart, President of the New York League of Republican Clubs, is now in Washington to arrange for a welcome of National scope for the returning ex-President. The details of the reception to Col. Roosevelt when he lands in New York between June 15 and June 21, will be discussed by Mr. Stewart with Mr. Taft tomorrow at the White House.

Mr. Stewart, who is a close friend of Mr. Roosevelt, in a statement regarding the former President's future, said to-night:

"Before he left for his African hunting trip Col. Roosevelt told me that he would not be a candidate for United States Senator from New York; that he would not think of becoming a candidate for Mayor of New York; that he would not be a candidate for President in 1912. Unless he has changed his mind in the last four weeks, he is as strongly in favor of the renomination of Taft as he was of his nomination in 1908. His friendship for the President is as close and as cordial now as at any time.

"The former President's only ambition is to become a useful private citizen and to exercise the inestimable privilege of a private citizen to speak his opinions and voice his convictions. I do not believe he could be induced to run for any office. Certainly he would not think of running for Congress with a view of becoming Speaker of the House. There will be a great demand that Col. Roosevelt on his return use his influence to reorganize the Republican Party of New York State, which without question is sadly in need of reorganization."

Exactly what part in the welcome of Col. Roosevelt the President will have is not known. Mr. Stewart had a conversation with Mr. Taft on the subject five weeks ago, and the President expressed his willingness to do whatever he could personally to make the reception a success.

The reception now on foot has been brewing ever since Col. Roosevelt's African plans were announced. Before he left New York on his hunting expedition the scheme was broached to him by Mr. Stewart, and his consent was requested. At that time, Mr. Stewart said to-night, though Col. Roosevelt did not decline, he asked that his decision be held in abeyance for a while.

In the last two months Mr. Stewart has been in communication with the ex-President by cable, and at last Mr. Stewart's arguments induced Col. Roosevelt to accept a welcome at the Nation's hand. The most important stipulation made by Col. Roosevelt is that the reception be on the day of his arrival in port.

Five weeks ago Mr. Stewart received from Col. Roosevelt a cable telling him that he had written in detail his suggestions and his consent to the reception. With that cable Mr. Stewart went to the President and asked his co-operation. The President said that he was heartily in favor of the plan and would do what he could personally to aid it.

The letters that have been received here from the hunter in Africa make it plain that he is still enthusiastically supporting Mr. Taft, and it is thought that the public meeting of the two men may have the effect of impressing that fact upon the country.

PITTSBURG LIKES ITS NEWS.

Not Willing to Ban Newspapers During Lent, Say Ministers.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 8.—Abstinence from newspaper reading will not be a popular Lenten penance, according to an expression of opinion by Pittsburg ministers of various denominations. Bishop Cortlandt Whitehead of the Pittsburg Episcopal Diocese was quoted as saying in a sermon in Grace Church, New York, on Sunday:

"I would advise you all to do without the newspapers during the Lenten period, and to replace their scandals and masses of ill-assorted information with more edifying works."

These views do not meet much agreement here in the discussion which has followed. Some of the statements of the ministers are:

The Rev. Dr. E. H. Ward, rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church: "That is something that hardly would be fair to the intelligent men and women of to-day. I would not for one moment consider asking my parishioners to abstain from the reading of newspapers for several weeks."

The Rev. Dr. A. W. Arundel, Trinity Church: "I certainly would not advise my parishioners not to read newspapers during Lent. Reading newspapers is like eating—we cannot do without either."

The Rev. Dr. T. M. Thompson, Moderator of the Pittsburg Presbytery: "I think the newspapers, in recording passing events of life, are recording the purposes of God."

The Rev. Dr. W. A. Jones, Knoxville Presbyterian Church: "I think the good Bishop has gone too far. He strikes at the very purpose of Lent if he advises his people to abstain from reading newspapers during that period."

The Rev. David Ferris, Calvary Church: "It's all rot. I cannot believe the Bishop said it. I am sure no other Episcopalian clergyman of this city would hold such an opinion."

WOMAN CLUBBED; MAYOR INQUIRING

A WITNESS IDENTIFIED

Picked Out of a Line of Police by a Barber as Having Knowledge of the Attack—Shibley Murder Echo.

One of the worst cases of police brutality in the history of the Police Department has been brought to the attention of Mayor Gaynor, the case in question being that of a woman who is said to have been unmercifully beaten by a policeman in the East Thirty-fifth Street Station. The Mayor, through Raymond B. Fosdick, one of his new Commissioners of Accounts, began an investigation of the matter yesterday, and the whole Police Department, not knowing what was being investigated, was on the anxious seat last night.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Fosdick went to the East Thirty-fifth Street Station with John Moretto, a barber of 404 East Thirty-fourth Street, who picked out John Grove as a policeman who went into his barber shop soon after the woman was brought in there on the night of Jan. 27 last. Grove, it is said, is not the man who assaulted the woman, but he is believed to know who the man is who did abuse her. Moretto positively identified him.

The name of the woman is known at present only to Mayor Gaynor, and it was said yesterday that there is every reason to believe that the Mayor knows where to find her when the time comes to deal with the policeman who beat her.

Mr. Fosdick, accompanied by Moretto and Policeman John Pheland, who is attached to his office, appeared unexpectedly at the East Thirty-fifth Street Station yesterday afternoon. Capt. Patrick Cray, who is a brother-in-law of Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, was in the station when they arrived.

Mr. Fosdick disclosed his identity and the authority under which he acted, and then told Capt. Cray to line up his men. This was promptly done, and Mr. Fosdick asked Moretto to pick out the policeman who entered his place following the assault. Moretto looked up and down the line, and then, pointing to Groves, said:

"There is the man."

Capt. Cray did not know what the matter was, and after Mr. Fosdick had told him that all the men except Groves could return to their duties he asked Mr. Fosdick what it was all about.

"I am sorry, Captain," Mr. Fosdick answered, "but I cannot tell you anything about it at this time."

A few minutes later Mr. Fosdick, Phelan, and Groves left the station, and went downtown. They went to the office of the Commissioner of Accounts, where Groves was put under examination.

Groves remained in the office some time, and then reported back to the East Thirty-fifth Street Station for duty. He would not say a word about what had occurred downtown. He is a gaunt-looking young fellow who, according to his police comrades, is not given much to talking, and he lived up to his reputation.

"Nothing doing," was his reply to questions about the inquiry.

Neither Mayor Gaynor nor Commissioner Fosdick would discuss the case in any way. This, however, is said to be the first time that a police investigation had been intrusted to a Commissioner of Accounts. It was taken to mean that this branch of the City Government will play an important part in the police reforms which the Mayor is said to have in view.

Lieut Joseph F. Ryan of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station was fined fifteen days' pay yesterday for not living up to the letter of the clubbing instructions issued by Police Commissioner Baker at the behest of Mayor Gaynor.

It was said that last week two men entered the station and complained that a policeman had struck them without cause. Ryan, it is said, made notes of the allegations and then dismissed them, taking no other action. Next day he reported to the Inspector, and thus Commissioner Baker learned of the complaint.

"As this is the first case," the Commissioner told Ryan, "I will let you off with a fine, but the next case of the kind I hear of the offender will be dismissed."

There were no developments yesterday in the cases of Policemen Keenan and Cunningham, who were transferred from the Westchester to lower east side stations last week, following their arrest of Westchester bartenders for violating the excise law. This is one of the cases, however, Mayor Gaynor is believed to have under consideration.

Mayor Gaynor received yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Shibley and Mrs. Lomas, parents of the two little boys who were murdered in the Bronx several weeks ago. For this murder the insane Herbert Jerome Denison is being held on suspicion. The Shibleys and Mrs. Lomas told Mayor Gaynor that they feared influence was being exerted to save Denison, and that they believed it necessary to appeal to him for justice in the case.

Mayor Gaynor expressed sympathy with them, but told them the case was in the hands of District Attorney Whitman and the Police Department and that he was certain justice would be done. He added, however, that he would be glad to do anything necessary to see that justice was done.

BRAGANZA'S EFFECTS SEIZED.

Creditors, Unable to Obtain Settlement, Send Them to Auction Room.

VIENNA, Feb. 8.—The creditors of Prince Miguel of Braganza, who married Miss Anita Stewart of New York at Dingwall, Scotland, last September, unable to obtain a settlement of their claims, have seized the furniture and other effects in the Prince's residence here and removed them to an auction room.

Prince Miguel and his wife are now in Paris. The Prince left the management of his affairs in the hands of a lawyer, who paid off most of the creditors immediately after the wedding, but several money lenders are reported to have made such exorbitant and usurious demands that the attorney refused to listen to them. The proceedings to-day were the outcome of disputed claims that amount to less than $80,000, and negotiations are proceeding to settle the affair. It is not considered likely that the Prince's belongings will actually be sold at auction.

Only recently the report was current that a syndicate of creditors intended to bring suit for $1,000,000 against Prince Miguel, the claim being set up that he had refused to pay to the syndicate, for borrowed money, one-fifth of the dowry of his marriage with Miss Stewart, which amounted to $5,000,000.

VOTE ON BUILDING STRIKE

At a meeting last night in Arlington Hall, St. Mark's Place, of several hundred delegates from various building trades unions, it was decided that a general referendum vote should be taken immediately in all the unions connected with the building trades on the question of supporting the steamfitters by a sympathetic strike to affect 100,000 men.

All the speeches favored a strike, and large amounts were pledged should a strike be determined upon by the delegates of various unions.

WOMAN HIT BY WATER TANK.

Cooler Hurled Against a Passenger on the Lakewood Limited.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Feb. 8.—The Central Railroad of New Jersey's Lakewood Limited, which leaves Jersey City at 3:40 o'clock and stops here only on its fast run to Lakewood, was making its usual swift dash through Matawan, about six miles from here this afternoon, when the water cooler in one of the cars was jarred from its fastenings as the train swept around the long curve between Matawan and this place. The heavy tank crashed to the floor and struck Mrs. Harry Rosevelt of this place on the leg.

Besides bruising the woman badly the tank emptied most of its contents of ice and water over her. She sprang up with a cry which aroused all the other passengers in the car. For the remainder of the trip to this place other women in the car were busy soothing and drying Mrs. Rosevelt. She was not much hurt.

J., Feb. 8.—William Buckley Murray, a former member of the class of 1911 of Rutgers College, who obtained a free scholarship at Columbia University, is counted by his Rutgers friends as a lucky man. He is now engaged playing the chimes at historic Trinity Church, New York, at a salary of $600 a year.

Murray had never played chimes before, but he had been the accompanist of the Rutgers College Glee Club, and he thought that if he could fill that place he could also hold the one at Trinity Church. Murray is taking a classical course at Columbia. His home is in Brooklyn.

CHARGED WITH SHOPLIFTING.

Woman Prisoner Said to be the Wife of a Prominent Tammany Man.

A woman who said she was Lena Beck, and refused to give her address, was arraigned in the Night Court last night, charged with shoplifting by the detective of a Sixth Avenue department store. Men who declared they recognized her said she was the wife of a prominent Tammany politician. She was accused of having taken $24 worth of goods, but denied the charge.

Magistrate O'Connor was about to hold her in $500 collateral for Special Sessions when James Todd of 311 West Thirtieth Street, the proprietor of several hotels in the city, suggested that she should have a lawyer to conduct her case and offered to go bail for her if the magistrate would remand her.

The magistrate agreed to hold her for a hearing in the Jefferson Market Court on Thursday morning and Todd provided the $500 bond. He said that he had known the woman for years. He refused to reveal her real name.

TO DIVORCE JUSTICE WEIL.

Wife Joins Reno Divorce Colony—Mrs. Willson Also There.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Nev., Feb. 8.—Arriving in this city last week, Mrs. David L. Weil, wife of Justice Weil of the Municipal Court of New York, has joined the divorce colony. What the grounds of her action will be is not yet disclosed. It is understood, however, that the couple were married only one month when their troubles began, and she left her husband.

Mrs. Alice Willson is among the recent arrivals from New York for the purpose of establishing a legal residence preparatory to filing a suit for divorce from her husband, Prof. James T. Willson of the medical department of Cornell University. Prof. Willson is stationed at the branch in New York City. The home of the Willsons has been in Mount Vernon, but for two years or more they have been separated.

It is understood that Mrs. Willson has instituted several suits for separation in New York, and that this is to be her final effort to secure relief from marital ties. There are no children or property rights involved.

CORPORATION TAX REPORTS IN

Some Have Been Filed and Will Be Sent to Washington—No Protests.

Reports of 150 corporations on which the new corporation tax is to be levied have been filed with Collector of Internal Revenue Charles W. Anderson, and will be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington.

Collector Anderson said yesterday that, so far as he knew, none of the reports received have been filed under protest.

Mr. Anderson said that he was not at liberty to make public the names of corporations which have reported, as they are averse to any publicity.

Some of the corporations whose reports have been received are those which are exempt from the tax, small concerns whose annual profits do not exceed $5,000. Others are corporations whose assessments will not be large.

"The large corporations are waiting until the last minute," said Mr. Anderson yesterday, "because they are having trouble in getting up the required reports. Making up inventories is causing the most trouble, we learn, for, while the law requires that inventories shall be made up for the calendar year, most of the corporations have been in the habit of making them for the fiscal year. Mr. Anderson has distributed blank forms to between 15,000 and 20,000 corporations in this district, but he says there are doubtless a large number of corporations whose names and locations have escaped those whose duty it is to distribute the blank forms. There is a penalty of from $1,000 to $10,000 for failure to file reports.

Some of the larger corporations are delaying reports awaiting the outcome of suits to test the constitutionality of the law.

SAYS ALLDS GOT $1,000 FROM HIM

H. G. Moe Tells the Senate That Other Legislators Took $4,000 and $1,000.

THEIR NAMES WITHHELD

Osborne Challenges Senate to Bring Them Out and Further Sensations Are Expected.

EX-SENATOR PLATT NAMED

Letters from Him and Allds Show That He Was Consulted About the Bills Affecting Bridges.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—Testimony which, unless refuted, will prove exceedingly damaging to Senator Jotham P. Allds, President Pro tem of the upper house, marked the opening session of the Senate hearing on the bribery charges preferred against Mr. Allds by his colleague, Senator Benn Conger.

It was a day when developments came with lightning-like rapidity. The hearing began at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. Before it came to a temporary close at 5 in the afternoon the charge that Senator Allds accepted a bribe of $1,000 to defeat a bill affecting bridge construction, the allegation of his accuser had become a twice-told tale.

But that story did not by any means monopolize the interest of the Senators who are sitting in judgment or the spectators who crowded the galleries and every available inch of space on the Senate floor that could be so occupied. They were waiting all day long for the mention of other names besides that of Senator Allds in connection with the boodling charges brought by Senator Conger. They were not gratified, though the narrative told by James W. Osborne, chief counsel for Senator Conger, in his opening address, and by the witnesses who testified, carried the audience again and again to a point where it seemed as though the explosion could not much longer be avoided.

Mr. Osborne threw out repeatedly what virtually amounted to a challenge or an invitation to the House-cleaning Senate to take advantage of the information he was able to supply in reference to other men who had shared in the offenses with which Senator Allds is charged. He made it painfully clear that of his own volition he would drag in the names of other men—that it was all up to the Senate.

"If any Senator should inquire while my witnesses are on the stand, he can have his curiosity gratified," said Mr. Osborne in effect again and again.

Disclosure Is Expected.

The response did not come, but with the knowledge that there are men in the Senate who are entirely out of sympathy with the methods alleged in the Conger charges there is a general expectation at the Capitol that the dynamite will be touched off before the hearing has progressed much further.

The danger points in the testimony had to do with a sum of $4,000, which Hiram G. Moe, who said on the stand to-day that he had handed the $1,000 bribe to Mr. Allds, had inclosed in an envelope, and given to another legislator, as well as with another sum of $1,000, which he said he paid to yet another man for his share in the work of defeating legislation to which the bridge companies represented by Mr. Conger objected. The names of these two men were not revealed.

It is rumored around the Capitol that the man said to have received the larger sum is no longer among the number of the living, and that the man referred to as having received the lesser sum is no longer attending to the people's business—at any rate, not at Albany.

That the organization element in the Senate will confine the inquiry to the narrowest possible limit became evident before the hearing had been under way long and a vote was taken on the motion to compel Senator Conger to submit a full bill of particulars. On this motion all but seven Senators voted as counsel for Senator Allds would have had them vote. The seven who voted adversely were those who attended the insurgent caucus and heard Conger state his reasons for not supporting Allds for President pro tem of the Senate. They are Senators Agnew, Brackett, Cordts, Davenport, Hinman, Newcomb, and Rose. On a later roll call Senator Travis of Kings threw in his lot with the little devoted insurgent band.

All the way the regulars put obstacles in the way of counsel for Senator Conger. It was indicated to-day that the name of ex-United States Senator Thomas C. Platt, who in 1901 still retained sufficient power to influence the course of events at the State Capitol, would be dragged in. Two letters written by Mr. Platt to Mr. Allds, who was majority leader of the Assembly in that year, were marked for identification with the understanding that they may be introduced later to aid the defense.

White Yields the Gavel.

The Senate was called to order by Lieut. Gov. White, who yielded the gavel a minute later to Senator Davis, as the Senate, under the special rule governing the hearing, went into committee of the whole. The next moment Senator Allds, dressed in frock coat, appeared in the doorway leading from the Senate cloak room, accompanied by Lewis E. Carr, Martin W. Littleton, Lewis E. Griffith, and Danforth E. Ainsworth, his counsel.

A minute later Mr. Osborne, Augustus Van Wyck, and ex-Judge David W. Van Hoesen, closely followed by their client, Senator Conger, pushed their way into the Senate Chamber.

"The Senator from the Forty-first (Conger) has the case," said Chairman Davis.

"We are ready to go on," replied ex-Judge Van Wyck.

Mr. Carr then arose and on behalf of Senator Allds asked that the other side be required to furnish a full bill of particulars in compliance with the formal request served on the counsel for Conger last week. A lengthy and largely technical argument in which Mr. Carr and ex-Judge Van Wyck took part followed. Several of the Senators also gave their views on the question. Senator Grady held that such specifications should be required, while Senators Brackett and Hinman, both of whom took part in the insurgent caucus, held that none was necessary.

Senator Davis ruled in favor of Senator Grady's contention. Senator Brackett took an appeal from the ruling. Five Senators, under the special rules, must support such a motion in order to get it before the house. Seven arose. On the final roll call the motion was carried by a vote of 38 to 8.

Under the original motion it was provided that the bill of particulars must be filed before 12:30. Senator Grady was on his feet making a motion to extend the time in view of the fact that much time had been occupied in debate, when Mr. Van Wyck ar heading the document to a page, who took it to the Senate desk.

The counsel for Senator Allds seemed taken by utter surprise. Allds himself fell back limply in his seat.

The next moment the sonorous voice of Col. Lafayette B. Gleason, Clerk of the Senate, rang through the chamber as he read the bill of particulars. It follows:

To the Senate of the State of New York and to Lafayette B. Gleason as clerk thereof, and to Senator Jotham P. Allds:

I, Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first district, do hereby, pursuant to the demand made upon me for a more specific statement of my charge in the above-entitled matter, make and file the following bill of particulars thereof:

First—The name of the person who delivered the sum of $1,000 to Jotham P. Allds, on or about April 23, 1901, is Hiram G. Moe of Groton, Tompkins County, N. Y.

Second—The said sum was demanded by Senator Jotham P. Allds of Benn Conger and Frank Conger in the interests of the American Bridge Company, (a corporation,) the said Frank Conger being an officer thereof.

Third—The particular bill referred to in my said charge was an act amending the highway law of the State of New York, which act has been introduced in the Assembly by Assemblyman Stevens and in the Senate by Senator Malby, and both of which acts (the Malby bill having passed the Senate) had been referred to the Assembly Committee on Internal Affairs.

Dated Feb. 8, 1910. BENN CONGER.

Augustus Van Wyck, New York, N. Y.;
James W. Osborne, New York, N. Y.;
David W. Van Hoesen, Cortland, N. Y., of counsel.

The bill of particulars was sworn to by Conger before Clerk Gleason.

Osborne Presents His Case.

After fully an hour had been consumed in argument on the preliminary motions, Mr. Osborne finally got the floor and proceeded with his opening address, in which the whole story of the alleged bribery of Senator Allds was told. It took him two hours to open his case.

Mr. Osborne began by telling the status of the highway law as affecting the construction of bridges at the period to which the Conger charges have reference, when the town boards had full power in the matter of bridgebuilding in their bailiwicks. Passing to the bridge legislation of the 1901 session, Mr. Osborne said that the bills introduced by Senator George L. Malby in the upper house and by Assemblyman Stevens of Franklin in his branch of the Legislature aimed at the destruction of their influence by providing that there must be a written contract whenever the amount to be expended by a town board for bridge building purposes exceeded $500; that whenever the amount exceeded $1,000 the plans must be submitted to the State Engineer, and that the project must be contingent on that official's approval, conditional on necessity and efficiency of plans. The bills also contained a provision which would make it necessary, whenever more than $2,000 was to be spent, to submit the matter to a referendum vote.

"The bridge people," said Mr. Osborne, "believe that the bills were not only inimical to the interests of the public, but injurious to their business."

Mr. Osborne then told how the Stevens bill was pending in the Committee on Internal Affairs in the Assembly, and how on Feb. 20, 1901, it was reported out to be amended so that it provided for a referendum whenever the cost of a bridge to be constructed exceeded $500. In the meantime the Malby bill was passed by the Senate and sent to the Assembly for concurrence. In the lower house that bill, too, was sent to the Committee on Internal Affairs, which thus became the custodian of both bills.

Sudden Change in Front.

"Now, then, on the 8th day of April, 1901, something happened," Mr. Osborne went on. "This Committee on Internal Affairs, which had heretofore been in a state of mind that out-heroded Herod and out-stevened Stevens, now reported out the Senate bill to be amended, and recommitted in a form that was entirely in the interest of the bridge companies—that is, the substance of the amended bill was that the contract need not be in writing, and that only when the bridge was to cost more than $10,000 was it to be left to a referendum. In other words, if the bridge companies themselves had written the bill they could not have done better for themselves, because there were so few bridges that would cost $10,000 that practically it was exactly what they wanted.

"So, we say that between Feb. 20 and April 8 there had been an entire change of front on the part of the Committee on Internal Affairs. Among other things the Senate will have to determine as Committee of the Whole is what motive the Committee on Internal Affairs had to change its opinion regarding this legislation.

"Another significant fact was that Stevens dropped in at a very opportune moment. The report of the committee was accepted; the bill was recommitted, as I say, exactly as the bridge companies would have wanted. Stevens came in in a great state of excitement, apparently, I find from reading the minutes, and he protested and said that the sting had been taken out of his bill; that the amendment was in favor of the bridges, and he demanded of the Assembly that it reconsider that bill. The Assembly did reconsider it, and as the result of Assemblyman Stevens's effort the bill was recommitted to the Committee on Internal Affairs exactly as it had come down from the Senate.

"No sooner had Stevens passed out from the Assembly than the Committee on Internal Affairs immediately arose and amended the Stevens bill itself to conform to the requirements of the bridge companies—that is, they put exactly the same amendment in the Stevens bill that just a minute before the Assembly had taken out of the Malby bill. Mr. Stevens, not keeping as close an eye on his bill as he might have done, allowed that to go through, and the bill then was recommitted amended exactly as the Internal Affairs Committee had intended to amend the Malby bill.

"Now, we claim here, among other things, that we will be able to show, if we are called on to do it, why it was that the Committee on Internal Affairs changed front.

Shows Allds's Position.

"We will show, in addition to that, that the learned respondent in this case, one of the most astute legislators that the State of New York has ever produced, was at that time the leader of Assembly and one of the members of the Rules Committee. And, if I understand the duty of the leader of the Assembly, that august and very highly responsible position requires him to become acquainted with the details of legislation pending before the Assembly. It is absolutely impossible, we shall claim, that it could have escaped his attention; that the Committee on Internal Affairs had been first in favor of the Stevens bill and suddenly switched around and became opposed to it.

"I call your attention to the fact also that apparently he concurred in all the votes that were made in the Assembly on that April 8; that he concurred in accepting the report which amended the bill apparently in favor of the bridge companies; that he concurred in the vote to reconsider the Malby bill and send it back, and that he concurred in the amendments of the committee which amended the Stevens bill in favor of the policies demanded by the bridge companies; that he did all that in one day.

"Now, we claim that his action that day of changing from one attitude to the other corroborates the witnesses which we shall here produce.

"The Stevens bill, in favor of the bridge companies, was resting, as we have seen, with the Internal Affairs Committee, and the Malby bill, expressing the policy of Malby and Stevens as to restrictions on letting contracts, was slumbering side by side with it. It must have been known to the learned respondent in this case that as long as that Malby bill remained in the committee it was an invitation to come up to the Captain's desk and settle.

"Between the time of the introduction of the Stevens bill and of the amendments, which took place on April 8, Benn Conger, then Assemblyman, was approached. I do not intend to state here by whom he was approached. If the other side wants to bring it out when Benn Conger takes the stand we will not object, but we will state here that Benn Conger was approached by the Committee on Internal Affairs, and he was substantially informed in language about which there could be no doubt that unless arrangements were made that the bill would be passed; that that bill would be reported out favorably. As a consequence he said to them: 'I have but a small interest in the bridges.'

Conger's Brother Interested.

"The great bridge company at that time, gentlemen, was the American Bridge Company. Conger said: 'I am but a small stockholder,' and, as a matter of fact, Benn Conger did not own any more than about $1,000 of stock in this bridge company at that time, but his brother, Frank Conger, was the Vice President of the American Bridge Company, and as a part of his business he had the sole and exclusive charge of bridge construction and highway improvement.

"Benn Conger said when he was approached: 'Gentlemen, I will send for my brother Frank.' Frank Conger came, and he had a consultation with certain persons who were interested, and had influence in the Committee on Internal Affairs, with the result that an agreement was reached, and if anybody in the Senate wants to bring out what that arrangement was we will tell it, but it is our desire, as far as mortal man can do it to confine ourselves to exactly the specific charge which is here presented to this honorable body.

"Now, the effect of this agreement that was entered into was that the amendments of April 8 were sent out into the Assembly by this committee. While this legislation was pending, the learned respondent—and I think that he is such an able navigator in legislative affairs that this ripple upon the waters of the Internal Affairs Committee could not have escaped his notice, for it is impossible for him, who has been such an able leader of the House not to have known that there was something rotten in Denmark—saw something in that committee which required his attention.

"The bridge companies were held up, and one question that I am going to ask this body is, if a man on a black horse rides up to you and puts a pistol at your head and says, 'Stand and deliver,' and you deliver, are you an accomplice?

"Stand and Deliver."

"That is what this Committee on Internal Affairs said to the bridge companies: 'Stand and deliver.'

"Matters were in this shape when an Assemblyman, the learned Assemblyman and the leader of the Assembly, whose business it was to know all these things, came up to Benn Conger and said in substance: 'Ha, ha! Conger, you think you have got your bill fixed already down there in the Internal Affairs Committee, do you? You forget there is a Committee on Rules, and I am the Committee on Rules to a certain extent.'

"As I understand it, about ten days before the Legislature adjourns all bills that have been unreported in the committees are taken cognizance of by the Committee on Rules. It was to this that Mr. Allds referred. 'Unless I am taken care of,' he said in substance to Conger, 'I will press that bill to passage.' Senator Conger thereupon said: 'Well, I will have to send for Frank.'

"Frank Conger was sent for, and Frank Conger entered into an agreement with Assemblyman Allds, the learned respondent here, to the effect that a certain sum of money was paid, to wit, the sum of a thousand dollars, that that bill would not be reported, so far as he was concerned, out of the Committee on Rules, and would not be pressed for passage."

Mr. Osborne then rehearsed the story of the payment of bribes to Allds and two other legislators, as afterward told in the tsetimony of Mr. Moe. He said that Allds had known that the charge had been made against him on the day after the insurgents' caucus, at which it was brought out, but had taken no steps to bring about an investigation until after the charge was made public.

To enlighten Senator Brackett, Mr. Osborne, in reply to questions, went over the procedure of the two bills in the Assembly up to the day when Assemblyman Stevens indignantly opposed the "taking of the sting" from the Malby bill, and told how, while he was not watching, the Chairman of the Assembly Committee on Internal Affairs—a member from Queens by the name of George W. Doughty—had put through a motion to tack the objectionable amendments onto the Stevens bill, and then have it reprinted and recommitted.

Smyth Takes the Stand.

After Mr. Osborne had finished his opening address he called as his first witness William A. Smyth. The witness was well past middle age, very businesslike in speech, manner, and appearance. He was sworn, and identified himself as the editor since 1872 of The Owego Times. Owego was the voting residence of ex-United States Senator Thomas C. Platt.

At the request of Mr. Osborne, the witness produced three letters and a telegram, which he said had been written by ex-Senator Platt and Mr. Allds in 1901, when the bills which figure in the charges were before the Assembly. Mr. Smyth, it appeared from the testimony, was President of an organization of business men in his home town. This organization was interested in seeing the Malby and Stevens bills defeated, in order to keep a bridge company, which employed a great number of men, in Owego. It had threatened to move if adverse legislation was passed. Frank Conger, a brother of Senator Conger, later became interested in this concern, which was known as the Owego Bridge Company.

It seems Mr. Smyth had gone to New York to enlist the aid of Senator Platt to have the bridge bills defeated. The first letter which was written to the editor by Mr. Allds follows:

My Dear Sir: The Senator has written me in relation to Senate bill No. 1,349, saying that you said that I said to you over the telephone that "it must go through." I trust you will look at the copy of your letter which you wrote the Senator, and immediately afterward do me the kindness to correct the impression which you gave him. If you will recall our conversation, you will remember that what I said was not that it "would have to go through," but that "I could not help you about this bill because it had already gone through."

This bill does not affect the bridge proposition, and when I am helping you and your friends upon a bill which you are really opposing I do think that I am entitled to be correctly reported, and I assume that it must have been an error of your stenographer or else the letter must have been very hastily dictated with reference to Senate bill No. 1,349. Yours very truly, J. P. ALLDS.

The telegram referring to the same incident read as follows:

The Hon. T. C. Platt, 49 Broadway, New York City:

Told Smyth it had already passed when he 'phoned, hence I could not stop it. It was already beyond us, and in hands of Governor. It was not objected to by the bridge men on its passage, provided the other bill was held up. The other bill stays in committee. J. P. ALLDS.

One of the other letters was just a simple note from Senator Allds thanking Smyth for correcting the misapprehension in the mind of Senator Platt. The third letter was from Mr. Platt to the editor. It follows:

Dear Smyth: The inclosed telegram from Mr. Allds is self-explanatory. It strikes me as being a little ridiculous that you should have asked me to prevent the passage of a bill that had already passed. According to Allds's statement, the bill that passed is not objectionable to the bridge people, provided the other bill is held.

There is no doubt the other bill will remain in the committee. Very truly yours, T. C. PLATT.

Had Recent Letter from Allds.

"What did you do with the other letter from Mr. Allds if you did receive one?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"I never received one from Mr. Allds except since this matter commenced," the witness replied.

Q.—No other letter? A.—No other letter with relation to this matter. I have received one since the charges were made.

Q.—Didn't you show another letter, other than those you have presented here, to William Conger? [A brother of Senator Conger.] A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did show this correspondence here to William Conger? A.—Yes, Sir.

"Now, the bill upon which he was helping you was to prevent the passage of the Highway bill, wasn't it?" asked Mr. Osborne.

The witness wanted to explain, but Mr. Osborne held him to a direct answer. The witness then said that was the way he remembered it, but that his memory was hazy.

Mr. Osborne then took up the statement of Mr. Smyth that he had received another letter since the Conger charges were made. The witness produced the letter to refresh his memory as to the date, and Mr. Osborne at once became greatly interested. The letter, which was from Allds, dated Jan. 27, was marked for identification, and finally, after counsel for Allds had entered strenuous objection and Senator Davis, who presided, had ruled adversely twice, Mr. Osborne carried his point, and had it filed as an exhibit, but was not permitted to read it in evidence or even examine it.

The witness finally admitted that he had shown Mr. Conger another letter which he had home in his desk. He testified that it had no bearing on the case, had not been written by Mr. Allds, nor was it a copy of any letter he had sent the accused Senator.

He was then turned over to counsel for the defense for cross-examiantion. Lewis E. Carr conducted it, and went briefly into the matter of the letters without bringing out anything new.

Moe Tells His Story.

There was a great craning of necks in the crowded Senate Chamber when Mr. Osborne, after counsel for Senator Allds had announced that they were through with the Owego editor, cried out:

"Will Mr. Moe take the stand?"

The next moment the spectators saw a slender man of clerical appearance, slightly bent, with pale, sharp features and black hair turning gray. Hiram G. Moe was sworn and said he had lived for fifty-two out of his fifty-nine years in Groton, Tompkins County, a little community where the Congers are the leading family. He had known Senator Benn Conger ever since the latter was born, and he had known Frank Conger, who died in March, 1902, all his life. At 17 years he got a position in the First National Bank at Groton, and had remained thirty-four years with that institution, advancing to the position of cashier. In 1901 he became confidential secretary to Frank Conger, and when the Mechanics' Bank was organized in Groton he became its cashier. He held that position for eight years, or until Jan. 1 last year, when he was appointed a General Committee clerk at the capitol through the influence of Senator Conger.

Mr. Osborne then brought his witness to April 22, 1901, when Mr. Moe said he had a talk with Frank Conger and in consequence took the latter's check for $6,500 to the First National Bank at Groton, where he received two drafts on New York for $3,000 each and $500 in cash. The check and the drafts were placed in evidence, notwithstanding objections from Mr. Littleton of Allds's counsel. The drafts were on the First National Bank of New York. Mr. Moe said he had cashed the drafts in the National Bank of Syracuse, where he had been identified by Guernsey Williams, an officer of the Syracuse Dry Goods Company. Mr. Williams was in the Senate chamber and was identified by the witness. Mr. Moe said he got the $6,000 in bills and immediately took a train for Albany, carrying the money in a small satchel. He spent the night with Senator, then Assemblyman, Benn Conger, in the latter's apartment in Lancaster Street.

"Now, when you got up in the morning what, if anything, did you do—the morning of the 25d?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"The first thing I did was to count the money to see if it was all there," said the witness, while the Senate chamber rang with the laughter of the spectators.

Says He Distributed Funds.

"I counted the money," he continued, "in the presence of Benn Conger, with whom I had a talk. I put the money in three envelopes, $4,000 in one and $2,000 in two envelopes, $1,000 in each, and put them in my pocket after sealing them, and then I came to the Capitol building. But before going to the Capitol I wrote the names of the parties on the envelopes."

"I will not ask you to state what name you wrote upon the envelope containing $4,000," said Mr. Osborne, "but did you write on it a name?"

"I did," replied the witness.

Q.—Upon one of the thousand-dollar envelopes did you write a name? A.—I did.

Q.—I do not ask you to state that now. Now, the third envelope—did you write upon it? A.—I did.

Q.—What name? A.—J. P. Allds.

Q.—Now, after that, I understand you to say that you put the envelopes in your pocket? A.—Yes.

Mr. Littleton interrupted and objected to the line of examination. He warned counsel on the other side that if they made an attempt by this character of evidence to "blacken the career of his client and destroy his character in the Senate and in this country they cannot hold us or make us responsible for a disclosure of the balance of the distribution of this particular fund."

"Now, with these envelopes marked as you have indicated; where did you go?" continued Mr. Osborne.

"I came to the Capitol," replied Moe.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—Mr. Benn Conger.

Q.—Where did you go then? A.—To the Assembly Chamber.

Q.—Without asking you the details of what happened, what did you do, if anything, with the envelope with the $4,000? A.—I delivered it to the man whose name was written on the envelope.

Q.—What did you do with the envelope marked "Allds"? A.—I handed it to Allds.

Q.—Was anybody present at the time? A.—Yes, Mr. Benn Conger.

"As we were coming into the Capitol," continued Moe, "or in the Assembly room, Mr. Conger said to me: 'This is Mr. Allds coming.' I never had seen him before. As we came up to him—I cannot remember the exact words, but Mr. Conger introduced me to Mr. Allds and told him I was representing his brother, Mr. Frank Conger. We passed along to the room that I have since learned was the committee room and passed inside the door. I took the envelope from my pocket and handed it to Mr. Allds and told him that Mr. Conger wished me to hand him that amount. He said, 'All right, Sir.'"

Q.—And which envelope was the one you handed him? A.—The one marked "J. P. Allds."

Q.—Now, did you deliver the other envelope with the $1,000 in it to the person whose name was on it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you go then? A.—I went home that same night.

Q.—Are you positive that the man to whom you handed the envelope containing $1,000 and marked "J. P. Allds" is the respondent in this case, J. P. Allds? A.—I am.

Mr. Moe concluded with a statement that he took the $500 that was left back to Groton and delivered it to Frank Conger.

Mr. Moe's cross-examination was unfinished when the investigation adjourned at 5 o'clock, and probably will be continued when the Senate as a committee of the whole reconvenes at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Ex-Senator Platt Retired Early.

At the home of Gustave Abel, 133 West Eleventh Street, where ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt is staying, it was said by Mrs. Abel last night that he had retired early in the evening, that he was fast asleep, and that he would not be disturbed under any consideration. She asked whether the matter about which the reporter had come was in connection with the Allds case, and being told that it was, she said she was sure the Senator could not be connected in any way with that.

FEAR FOR WOOD'S HEALTH.

Said in Baltimore the General's Old Injury Made an Operation Necessary.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 8.—From a reliable source comes the information that Gen. Leonard Wood's health was seriously threatened by the injury to his head, which is said to have resulted from an accident he sustained in Cuba while he was Governor General. Upon arising from his desk one day he struck his head against a chandelier so hard that his skull was injured.

Later he submitted to an operation in which, it is said, a piece of bone was removed. The skin was allowed to grow over the wound. Consequences attributed to this condition developed which eventually became so troublesome as to occasion fears for the General's health. Unfavorable symptoms became manifest within the last few weeks. This determined him to undergo another surgical operation in the hope of obtaining permanent relief.

Extreme reticence is being maintained at the hospital regarding Gen. Wood's case. Beyond a statement as to his condition no information could be obtained there. Despite denials yesterday that Gen. Wood had undergone an operation there is the best of authority for saying that he was operated upon last Saturday.

The cheering reports concerning the General's condition to-day would indicate that he was recovering from the effects of the operation, but it could not be learned whether it was successful.

New Westchester Road Incorporates.

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—The Westchester Northern Railroad Company of White Plains was incorporated to-day with a capital of $1,000,000 to operate a steam or electric railroad forty-five miles long, of which thirty-five miles is to be in New York and ten miles in Connecticut. The main line is to be operated from the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway at White Plains to the line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at Danbury, Conn. There will be a branch line fourteen miles long from Pound Ridge, Westchester County, to the New York, New Haven & Hartford line in Putnam County. The Directors are L. S. Miller, W. A. Cokeley, New York City; Allan Westcott, Lawrence; R. P. Buell, Bayside; Robert T. Bird, Hartford; James L. Crider, Mount Vernon; John C. Gleason, New Rochelle; Charles L. Nagle, Bayside, and James J. Dwyer, Brooklyn.

PRINCETON REPORT LEAVES DISPUTE OPEN

ADVOCATES NEITHER SIDE

Donor Deprecates the Dispute and Says He Hopes the Matter Will Be Speedily Dropped.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 8.—It became known here to-day that the special committee of five appointed by the Board of Trustees of Princeton University from its membership to consult with Mr. Procter with regard to his offer of $500,000 for a graduate college would, contrary to expectation, return a non-committal report. It has been learned that the committee reached a decision in New York yesterday in which all concurred. The report will contain a review of the facts of the case.

A prominent graduate suggested a way here to-day for the university still to obtain Mr. Procter's half million dollars. He said:

"The special committee that was appointed, as I understand it, will return to the board what it has found to be the questions involved in the acceptance of the gift. This will not be in favor of Mr. Procter or Dean West or President Wilson, and the only thing that it will urge will be a speedy settlement of the difficulties. Now, since it is for the assembled board to determine what action is necessary, it is yet possible, in my opinion, for the board to consider Mr. Procter's letter of withdrawal, in which he begs leave to withdraw the gift, and urge upon him rather to await the opinion of the board, to which the committee brings for the first time a complete statement of the position of the three parties concerned.

"The board has not yet, so far as I know, expressed itself absolutely as to what kind of a graduate college it wants, and it will have its first opportunity to visualize the various questions when presented on Thursday."

The report of the Special Committee has been a matter of intense interest hereabouts, and rumor had it that it favored President Wilson's ideas. It doesn't favor anything but expeditious ending of the controversy. Several meetings have been held by the Special Committee, but yesterday's was the only one subsequent to Mr. Procter's withdrawal of his gift.

The committee consists of Thomas D. Jones, Chicago, Chairman; the Rev. John Dixon, Trenton; Henry W. Green, Trenton; Cleveland H. Dodge, New York, and Henry B. Thompson, Wilmington, Del.

Even if the Procter offer and the other half million dollars raised to meet it are not available, the university has now some $830,000 which came to it from the bequest of Mrs. Thompson Swann.

A graduate college will be built, in any event, and indications are that work will be started soon.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 8.—"I am very sorry that this topic of my offer to Princeton has been taken as the means for a bitter quarrel between the alumni of that institution, and I hope the matter will be allowed to drop," said William Cooper Procter here to-day.

Mr. Procter said that the efforts of alumni and friends of other colleges in this country to get him to donate the $500,000 to their school had been without result. He said that the money he gave to Princeton was in furtherance of his own ideas and that since these ideas did not seem to conform to those of other people he would not offer the money to any other institution in this country.

Among the Cincinnati alumni of Princeton here there is an opinion that President Wilson will be asked to resign next Thursday.

Strike at Coats Thread Mills.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 8.—The refusal of the new management of the J. & P. Coats, Limited, thread mills, to grant an increase of 10 per cent. in wages precipitated another strike to-day among the back boys, doffers, and twister tenders who caused a complete shutdown of the plant two weeks ago. When the day ended 700 operatives were out of work, one-half of whom had been forced out through the strike of the other half.

tion of specialist in Hocking Coal, in November, 1909, had an interview with Mr. Keene in the presence of Mr. Haskins. Mr. Criss states he was assured of the safety of the business, he obtained a guarantee of a certain amount of business, a promise of immunity from certain losses, and he received from Lathrop, Haskins & Co. a check for $25,000 as security for any contracts he might make for them.

Giving Out Pool Orders.

"Orders were given out in two ways: First, Lathrop, Haskins & Co. gave out orders, good until countermanded, to M. Fiske & Co., Day, Adams & Co., Rollins & Co., and A. J. Elias & Co. to buy certain named amounts of the stock at named prices, all on a down scale. Naturally all these firms placed these orders, in their own names, with the only specialist in Hocking Coal, Hugh F. Criss.

"Second, prior to Jaunary 19, 1910, Mr. Criss had been given orders daily by Lathrop, Haskins & Co. to buy the stock on a down scale, and if any was bought he was to give up J. M. Fiske & Co, Day, Adams & Co., Rollins & Co., or A. J. Elias & Co. at his discretion, but generally to use the above names in rotation. This was done without Lathrop, Haskins & Co. having any agreement or understanding with these firms, nor did Mr. Criss ever attempt to have any understanding with said firms that they would honor his reports. What business was done under these last-named conditions was about the following, prior to Jan. 19, as stated by these firms:

Day, Adams & Co.	0	0	500	shares on 8 dates
Rollins & Co.	0	0	1,000	shares on 8 dates
A. J. Elias & Co.	0	0	800	shares on 2 dates

Mr. Criss's books vary but little from the above statement. J. M. Fiske & Co. accepted all Mr. Criss's reports on Jan. 19 and do not dispute any of them. It seems that, unlike Day, Adams & Co., Rollins & Co., and A. J. Elias & Co., J. M. Fiske & Co. had been frequently accepting during November, December, and January Mr. Criss's reports of purchases made on the orders of Lathrop, Haskins & Co. Prior to January 19, on the several occasions on which the above three firms received Mr. Criss's reports on orders given to Mr. Criss by Lathrop, Haskins & Co., the reports were never accepted until Lathrop, Haskins & Co. had confirmed and requested them to clear.

As these firms were merely to receive the stock from the sellers and deliver it to Lathrop, Haskins & Co., it would seem to be merely what is known as a clearing business for Lathrop, Haskins & Co.

Conditions on Jan. 19.

"On Jan. 19 the following orders from Lathrop, Haskins & Co., all good till countermanded, were on the books of the following firms:

	Shares.
Day, Adams & Co.—
Buy 200 Hocking Coal	85¾
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	88
A. J. Elias & Co.—
Buy 100 Hocking Coal	84¾
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	82½
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	81½
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	80½
Rollins & Co—
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	82½
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	81½
Buy 300 Hocking Coal	80½

"All of the above firms had given the above orders to Mr. Criss in their own names.

"On Jan. 19, before the opening, Lathrop, Haskins & Co. gave to Mr. Criss orders to buy 200 Hocking Coal at 88¼ and 200 shares each ¼ down, with no instructions when to stop buying. Mr. Criss was to give up any of the four firms before mentioned, at his own discretion, under instructions from Lathrop, Haskins & Co., but without any authorization at any time from any of said firms either to Lathrop, Haskins & Co. or to Mr. Criss.

"During the break in the price of the stock, which became a panic before noon, Mr. Criss bought all the stock, for which he had direct orders from Day, Adams & Co., A. J. Elias & Co., and Rollins & Co. Day, Adams & Co. accepted and paid for all the stock bought on their own direct orders. A. J. Elias & Co. accepted and paid for 700 shares, but rejected a reported purchase of the last 300 shares of their own direct orders on the ground that their attempted cancellation of all orders had secured the canceling of the last 300-share order. This was at first denied by Mr. Criss, but subsequently admitted by him.

"Rollins & Co. accepted and paid for the first 300 shares, but rejected the remaining 600 shares of their own direct orders, which orders they conclusively proved they had canceled with Mr. Criss in time. This leaves no claims by Mr. Criss growing out of the direct orders of the above-mentioned three firms, except as to whether Rollins & Co. canceled in time the orders for the last 600 shares.

Rejected Buying Reports.

"On the orders from Lathrop, Haskins & Co. to Mr. Criss to buy 200 shares each ¼ down, and give up any of the four above-mentioned firms at discretion, Mr. Criss bought and reported as follows, (omitting J. H. Fiske & Co., who accepted everything):

	Shares.
Day, Adams & Co.	3,000
A. J. Elias & Co.	3,000
Rollins & Co.	1,600
Total	8,500

"All of these firms rejected the above reports. The testimony as to how promptly the reports were rejected was somewhat conflicting. To your special committee it appears that as the firms above mentioned gave out none of these orders, had authorized nobody to use their names, and had no knowledge that their names were to be used, they were justified in rejecting the reports, unless the firms by some act of their own obligated themselves to take the stock reported.

"Day, Adams & Co. received reports by telephone from the Exchange of the purchase of 800 shares of Hocking Coal. The clerk who received the telephone messages wrote on slips of paper the reports as they came over the telephone, and answered back that Day, Adams & Co. knew nothing about them. Then word came from the Exchange that they were for the account of Lathrop, Haskins & Co., which the clerk wrote on the same slips of paper.

"Mr. Adams saw these slips, and at once telephoned to their telephone clerk in the Exchange to return to Mr. Criss his original reports, which had remained in Day, Adams & Co.'s telephone booth in the Exchange. Mr. Adams then sent to the Exchange and instructed his partner, Mr. Clarke, to see that the written reports of Mr. Criss were returned to Mr. Criss. Mr. Clarke and the telephone clerk at the Exchange both testify that the reports were returned to Mr. Criss. Upon Mr. Adams's return to his office he found that another clerk had seen the reports (as written down by the telephone clerk) for account of Lathrop, Haskins & Co., and, in ignorance of the action of the firm in relation thereto, had sent a written report to Lathrop, Haskins & Co. of the purchase of 800 shares for their account.

"This clerk states that he had discovered his error and had sent a messenger to get the report back within fifteen minutes of its delivery, but had not secured it. On Mr. Adams receiving this information the firm at once sent a senior clerk to request its return, which Mr. Haskins refused, under advice of counsel.

"A clerk of A. J. Elias & Co., without the knowledge of the firm, reported by telephone to Lathrop, Haskins & Co. the purchase of 200 shares at 86¾ and 200 shares at 85¾, bought by Mr. Criss, on Lathrop, Haskins & Co.'s order. Mr. Elias promptly rejected the reports, and endeavored to return them to Mr. Criss. Mr. Criss was not on the floor. They were sent to the office of Mr. Criss. He was not there. They were again taken to the Exchange. Mr. Criss was still away. So the reports were left on Mr. Criss's seat at the Hocking Coal post.

"It is claimed that Rollins & Co. reported by telephone to Lathrop, Haskins & Co. the purchase of 200 shares at 87¼ and 200 shares at 86¼.

"The testimony on this point is conflicting. The written reports of Mr. Criss, together with subsequent ones, were rejected by Mr. Rollins promptly and returned to Mr. Criss.

Conflict as to Ratifications.

"Whether there were any acts of ratification is a question upon which the parties take conflicting positions. The acts relied upon by Mr. Criss as constituting such ratification differ in the several cases, but it may be said generally in respect to all of them that the evidence shows that any such acts were performed not by any members of any of the firms, but by clerks or subordinates without the actual knowledge of the firms themselves.

"No doubt the authorities of the Stock Exchange may determine such questions in certain proceedings which they are authorized by the constitution to conduct, as upon proceedings for arbitration brought under the rules, or in passing upon claims of members filed against the proceeds of a membership sold under the rules, but a general power to decide upon its own initiative questions of legal liability arising between members of the Exchange, involving, as they frequently must, the rights of customers or other non-members, presents complications.

"The business transacted between the members is regulated by the rules of the Exchange, which are binding upon them, and, if such transactions become the subject of judicial inquiry, these rules are regarded by the courts as constituting the custom according to which the business is done.

"The Exchange can, indeed, take cognizance of any infraction of the rules constituting moral turpitude or conduct inconsistent with those principles of honor and integrity the maintenance of which is a part of its objects.

"An inquiry having this for its purpose may always be directed by the Governing Committee, and in a proper case it is its duty to do so and to decide all such questions as presented.

Rejection of Purchases Warranted.

"Having in view the discharge of this duty, your committee reports that in its opinion the conduct of Day, Adams & Co., Rollins & Co., and A. J. Elias & Co. in rejecting the reports in question and disclaiming responsibility for the transactions reported thereby was fully warranted by all the rules and practices of the Exchange, and that the members of said firms are subject to no just criticism therefor.

"Lathrop, Haskins & Co. accept responsibility for all purchases made by Mr. Criss and J. M. Fiske & Co. accept responsibility for all purchases reported to them by Mr. Criss. It appears to your committee that Mr. Criss, for his firm, is responsible to all sellers for all his purchases which have not been accepted and paid for by others and the claims of his firm are against Lathrop, Haskins & Co. If any of the sellers to whom he gave the name of J. M. Fiske & Co. choose voluntarily to accept the responsibility of J. M. Fiske & Co. and release Mr. Criss, that is their affair.

"The use by Hugh F. Criss on Jan. 19 and 20 of offensive language in relation to the acts of Day, Adams & Co. A. J. Elias & Co., and Rollins & Co., was not warranted by the facts and merits severe condemnation.

"The acts of the Stock Exchange firms in subscribing to the Columbus & Hocking Coal and Iron pools for account of Lathrop, Haskins & Co., thereby practically lending their names to this undertaking, also merit severe condemnation.

"The volume of transactions in Hocking Coal for six months prior to Jan. 19 had been light, averaging only about 800 shares per day.

"Mr. Haskins and Mr. Fiske, while admitting that the net earnings of the company up to the present time had been very small, seemed to have the most confident belief in what they called the 'prospective value' of the stock, based upon future earnings from extensions and new discoveries. As a result of this faith large purchases of stock were made and large sums were advanced by Lathrop, Haskins & Co. for the development of the company. A task was undertaken beyond their means, resulting in their failure.

"F. L. Eames, Ernest Groesbeck, J. T. Atterbury, Henry K. Pomroy, F. L. Rodewald, Special Committee."

One notable thing about the report is the refusal of the committee to pass upon the legal aspect of the claims by Mr. Criss against those who repudiated his orders as far as they hinge on the responsibility of the clerks who made acceptance of some of these orders. Suits for breach of contract have already been brought against the members of the pools on behalf of outsiders who lost money, and the receiver of J. M. Fiske & Co. is also about to delve into this question.

James R. Keene not being a member of the Stock Exchange is not mentioned in the report. Whatever responsibility he may have had for the collapse of the pool it is the intention of Receiver Ernst of J. M. Fiske & Co. to learn when he gets Mr. Keene on the stand in the Federal Bankruptcy Court next week.

HOW TO STOP USE OF MEAT

Solving High Cost of Living Problem and Increasing Health

FOODS THAT NOURISH AND CURE

Meat contains about 20 per cent. protein, 8 per cent. fat and over 70 per cent. water, 25 cents a pound for water! "Christian's Protoid Nuts" contain 36 per cent. protein, 49 per cent. fat, 6 per cent. starch, 5 per cent. sugar and only 4 per cent. water. Protein builds the tissue and cells of the body; fat, sugar and starch fill them with energy. The various pure foods manufactured by Eugene Christian, the well-known food scientist, supply nearly everything the human body needs, and they are cleaner, taste better and the cost is 1-3 that of meat. If you use them you neither need nor want meat.

Eugene Christian, whose address is Dept. U, 7 East 41st St., New York, has prepared a valuable treatise on the meat question, giving a complete solution of the high cost of living problem. It has just been published in pamphlet form and will be mailed free, together with a copy of Mr. Christian's new book, "How Foods Cure," which tells the result of fifteen years' scientific study and experimenting with human nutrition. It is a fact that the best food, if improperly combined at meals, will poison instead of nourish

SENATORS TO STUDY INCREASE IN PRICES

Committee Will Probably Be Named To-day Independently of the Lower House.

ROOSEVELT STORY DENIED

Steward Says Only Fresh Meat Was Served at the White House Table in His Term.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Senator Elkins's outburst last week against the ineffective investigation of the cost of living, proposed under the Lodge resolution, bore fruit to-day and after a conference with all parties interested the Finance Committee reported this morning a compromise measure bearing the name of Mr. Elkins.

The resolution makes no provision for co-operation with the House Ways and Means Committee, and the likelihood now is that at the south end of the Capitol the whole matter will be dropped as soon and as quietly as possible, while the Senators are left to explain away the cost-of-living bugaboo next Summer before the elections. The resolution directs that a report shall be made, if possible, before the end of the present session.

The resolution calls for the investigation of the increased price of such articles as meat, grain, provisions, cotton, wool, clothing, rents, lumber, coal, iron, oil, brick, and cement.

One suggestion is that the increased production of gold in the period indicated may have cheapened the purchasing power of money, and that while a single dollar does not now purchase what it did ten years ago, because of higher wages, there are so many more dollars in existence now than then that the total purchasing power remains the same.

The committee of seven will probably be appointed to-morrow when the resolution is adopted.

Before the Moore special committee of the House investigating the food cost question, Food Inspector Dodge continued his testimony to-day with the presentation of a tabulation showing that since 1897 the average price of meats has more than doubled. He also revealed a system of boycott used by commission men to prevent retailers from lowering their prices to the consumer by buying directly from the farmer.

The committee is considering making a request to Congress for authority to summon retailers and to require the production of books and records, in order that the question of the mutual relations of the farmer, the middlemen, and the consumers in the District of Columbia may be sifted to the bottom.

Henry Pinckney, a negro messenger in the Executive Offices of the White House, who served as steward under the Roosevelt Administration, denied to-day the testimony given before the committee yesterday by an Inspector of the local Health Department that "putrid" meat had been served to President Roosevelt at the White House. Pinckney declared that Mrs. Roosevelt always supervised the purchase of market supplies, and that only the freshest meats were served at the White House table.

BEEF INQUIRY TO BE LONG.

Grand Jury in Chicago Will Not Report for Three Weeks.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—It will be three weeks before the Federal Grand Jury completes its hearing of evidence in the Government's inquiry into the alleged Beef Trust and before any action by the jurors is reported to Judge Landis. This was announced by District Attorney Edwin Sims to-day after all the witnesses from New York at present in Chicago had been heard.

Moses H. Joseph, Secretary of the New York Butchers' Dressed Beef Association, testified for about an hour. Arthur Colby, assistant treasurer of the National Packing Company, who appeared to-day, will be questioned again to-morrow.

ASKS NEW INSURANCE LAWS.

Supt. Hotchkiss's Bills Are Introduced in the Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—Measures affecting the insurance and banking laws were introduced to-day at the request of Supt. Hotchkiss of the State Insurance Department and Supt. Cheney of the State Banking Department. One of the bills introduced by Senator Grattan and Assemblyman Allen would require the examination of fire, surety, casualty, and miscellaneous insurance companies, as well as assessment and fraternal orders at least once in every five years. There is also a general anti-rebate provision similar to these in force in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, penalizing rebating and discriminations, not only in writing life insurance, but in the issuing of fire, casualty, surety, and miscellaneous policies as well. The power is given to the Superintendent to withhold in his discretion certificates of authority to do business from both domestic and foreign companies. One of the bills prohibits also reinsurance, except with the approval of the Insurance Department.

Another bill would authorize fire insurance companies to do a marine insurance business and to write sprinkler leakage insurance, and permits ocean marine companies to insure against all the risks of transportation, whether on land or sea. The provisions of another measure would enable casualty companies to write what is known as teams property damage insurance, as well as broader automobile insurance policies, and would authorize stock companies to write insurance on horses and other live stock.

It is expected that other bills will be introduced soon to prohibit the further incorporation of co-operative live stock insurance associations and to bring within the supervision of the State Department both Lloyds insurance companies and the so-called town and county co-operative companies.

One of the banking law amendments provides that the State shall pay the expenses of the State Banking Department. The expenses are paid now by the institutions under its supervision. Another bill allows State banks to issue time certificates of deposit in the same manner as trust companies, and provides that under certain conditions they need not carry reserve against deposits represented by such certificates.

The penal law is amended by the third bill, making it a misdemeanor for a Director, officer, or employe of a bank, as well as of a trust company, to make any agreement, express or implied, before or at the time of issuing a certificate of deposit by which its holder may receive payment in advance of its maturity.

Jewish citizens renewed their efforts to secure exemption from the Sunday labor laws to-day, when Assemblyman Levy introduced a measure which, in similar form, has been defeated at former sessions of the Legislature. This year, however, the introducer says that a number of strong Orthodox Jewish organizations will push the measure. The bill provides that no person "who conscientiously believes that the seventh day of the week ought to be observed as the Sabbath and actually refrains from labor on that day, and who has filed written notice of such belief with the Clerk of the county in which such person resides, shall be liable to prosecution for performing labor on Sunday, provided he disturbs no other person who is attending public worship or observing such day as a holy time or keeping such day as one of tranquil rest and repose."

GIVE PEARY $10,000; HE GIVES IT AWAY

White House, Washington, D. C., Feb. 7, 1910.

Robert E. Ely, Esq.:

Dear Sir: I am glad to know that a National testimonial is to be tendered to Commander Robert E. Peary at the Metropolitan Opera House to-morrow night. I am very sorry that I cannot be present to testify to my sympathy with this action. I sincerely hope, as is now proposed, Congress will take some substantial notice of the great achievement of Commander Peary which has reflected such great credit on American enterprise, persistence, courage, and endurance.

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Seth Low, as one of the committee, then offered a resolution praising Commander Peary for his work, and asking that the meeting earnestly petition Congress to "make some special and appropriate recognition of the achievement of Commander Peary in reaching the north pole and winning for the United States the prize so earnestly striven for century after century by a great company of brave and adventurous men."

When Mr. Low asked all those who were in favor of the resolution to stand up not a person in the house remained seated. Gov. Hughes then presented to Commander Peary the purse containing $10,000. The Commander thanked the Governor, the committee, and those present in behalf of the men who had stood by him in the North, and his friends who had stood by him in this country. If the Government saw fit to recognize his services he said he hoped it would be in such form that it would be able to take advantage of his past experience in the exploring line to enable him to direct another expedition to be sent in search of the south pole.

"Your interest, approval, and applause," he told the audience, with a show of deep feeling, "are my best testimonials, and they will never be forgotten by me or my men. This money," he went on, holding up the purse, "I will deposit to-morrow in a bank as a joint contribution toward fitting out an antarctic expedition to enter the Stars and Stripes in a manly race for the discovery of the south pole against our British cousins."

The Commander's unexpected announcement stirred the audience even more deeply than anything else during the evening. The cheering lasted several minutes, and when it had subsided Gov. Hughes said:

"So the finest endeavor has its fitting crown in generosity."

After the band had played "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," Gov. Hughes announced that Commander Peary would hold a reception on the stage. Apparently every one in the audience struggled through the narrow passages to the rear of the stage in an endeavor to shake the explorer's hand. The reception kept up for an hour after the regular meeting had come to an end.

Altogether about $4,000 was taken in at the box office. The testimonial to the explorer was held under the auspices of the Civic Forum and the honorary committee of thirty-one New York citizens, made up as follows:

Charles B. Alexander, Andrew Carnegie, Henry Clews, R. Fulton Cutting, William C. Demorest, Stuyvesant Fish, A. S. Frissell, Thomas H. Hubbard, Adrian H. Joline, Albert Lewisohn, John G. Milburn, William C. Muschenheim, Norman B. Ream, Jacob H. Schiff, Theodore P. Shonts, William H. Bliss, Hugh J. Chisholm, Robert J. Collier, H. P. Davison, Cleveland H. Dodge, Henry C. Frick, Elbert H. Gary, Archer M. Huntington, Otto H. Kahn, Seth Low, Henry Morgenthau, Henry Fairfield Osborn, John Harsen Rhoades, Isaac N. Seligman, Paul M. Warburg, and Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr.

After the testimonial Commander Peary was the guest of honor at a dinner given by Henry Clews in the Laurel Room of the Hotel Astor. Mr. Clews said that a false prophet had attempted to share the victory of the frozen north with the Commander, but that his exploded pretensions had only brightened the glory of the one and only real discoverer.

Thirty guests besides Commander Peary were at the dinner, including Gov. Hughes, Acting Consul General of Japan K. Yamafaki, Dr. and Mrs. E. R. L. Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rann Kennedy, Andreas Dippel, John Graham Bliss, Capts. Samuel and Robert Bartlett, Percy Mackaye, W. C. Muschenheim, Isaac N. Seligman, Jacob H. Schiff, Henry Morgenthau, and Col. George C. Treadwell.

PEARY'S PLAN ACCEPTED.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The Board of Managers of the National Geographic Society accepted this afternoon the proposal of Commander Peary that the Peary Arctic Club and the Geographic Society co-operate in fitting out an expedition to explore the antarctic regions, and reach the south pole, if possible. The acceptance rests on the condition that the society is able to raise $50,000 as its share of the undertaking, in return for the use of the Roosevelt, in which Commander Peary made his last trip into north polar waters.

The discoverer of the north pole will take an active part in directing the preparations for the expedition, and will place at the disposal of the voyagers his complete equipment of sledges and fur clothing. In accordance with his suggestion it is planned to have the party headed by Capt. Bartlett of the Roosevelt.

The decision of the Board of Managers was reached after the reading of reports from the Finance Committee and the Research Committee, the former submitted by Dr. Alexander Graham Bell and the latter by Prof. Henry Gannett, the new President of the society. The reports indorsed the proposal. The statement from the Finance Committee included Peary's estimate that the expense, with the cost of the vessel eliminated, would be not more than $100,000. Any expenditure greater than $50,000 is to be shared equally by the two organizations.

Steps will be taken at once to see if the Geographic Society's contribution can be collected. Either circular letters will be sent out to the 55,000 members or a notice will be inserted in the organization's magazine. The expectation is that within a month the fund will be obtained if it can be obtained at all. The society will endeavor to interest prominent men outside of the membership. The society's treasury contains a reserve fund of $100,000, but it is the hope of the managers that this will not have to be touched.

If the proposed expedition in the Roosevelt becomes a reality it will start from this country next Fall, arriving at Coates Land in January or February, 1911. If the progress toward the pole is successful the destination will be reached about the end of the next year.

Thus the proposed expedition will be made simultaneously with the one under the leadership of Capt. Robert F. Scott of the Royal British Navy. The American party will start, according to the plan, from a base on one side of Coates Island, next January or February. At about the same time the British explorers will commence their march from the other side of the Antarctic area, 1,800 miles distant. The two groups will move down converging lines, having their apex at the south pole, so that the expeditions will be in the nature of an international race for the honor of the discovery.

If the activities of the two expeditions develop into an actual race, the British party will have a decided advantage. The Americans will start from a point 800 or 900 miles distant, while the British base is more than 100 miles nearer. The men under Capt. Scott will have the further advantage that they will be traveling for the greater part of the way along a route already charted by Lieut. Shackleton, who last year reached a point only ninety-seven miles from the goal.

WOMEN MAY DECIDE SUFFRAGE QUESTION

Vote on Whether They Want the Ballot Provided in Senator Brackett's Bill.

FAVORED BY NEITHER SIDE

Suffragists Say It Would Be Unconstitutional, Needless, and Valueless as an Expression of Opinion.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—Seeing the forces of the woman suffragists and those of the "antis" lined up for a hostile demonstration, Senator Edgar T. Brackett, the hero of many legislative battles, jumped into the fray to-day by introducing a bill intended to put to vote of the women of the State the question of whether or not they really want the ballot.

This action is welcomed by neither side, it being held that such a vote would not show conclusively the real sentiment. The suffragists say they prefer their own method of demonstrating to the legislators that women do want the franchise as a matter of protection.

Senator Brackett's bill provides for a vote of the women on the Monday preceding the general election next Fall, the election officials to be required to keep open the polls two days instead of one. There is no constitutional prohibition against women voting on such a question, it is pointed out.

Registration of the women who vote at the special election is not required by Senator Brackett's bill, although in general the management of the election is made about the same as at a general election.

Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch of the Equal Franchise Society of Albany has furnished to members of the Legislature statistics showing the growth of the demand for woman suffrage in the State. According to Mrs. Blatch's figures, 300,000 persons signed the petition in favor of giving women the vote in New York State in 1894. There are now 20 organizations in the State, which are in favor of suffrage.

Opposed by Suffragists Here.

Opposition was aroused here among the woman suffrage organizations the moment the purport of the Brackett bill was made known. Leader after leader, including Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Dr. Anna Shaw, Mrs. Ida Husted Harper, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, and Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, denounced it as a blow aimed at the woman suffrage movement. Mrs. Belmont was especially bitter in her denunciation. She at once got into touch with a lawyer, whom she consulted as to its constitutionality.

At the headquarters of the Women Opposed to Suffrage it was clear that the "antis" did not think they had anything to fear from a submission of the matter to the women of the State at this time. They referred to a similar test in Massachusetts ten years ago, where only a very small percentage of the women voted for suffrage.

Mrs. Belmont, for the suffragists, said: "I do not believe such a bill is constitutional. I have consulted one of the ablest lawyers of the city, who gave it as his opinion that the Brackett bill will never stand the test of the courts. He based his opinion on the ground that it would be unconstitutional for the State to refer such a question to non-voters. Such a bill would put the State to an enormous expense, and uselessly, because nothing would be decided."

Mrs. Ida Husted Harper, biographer of Susan B. Anthony, was opposed to the Brackett measure as expensive and useless.

Mrs. Gilbert E. Jones, anti-suffrage leader, was enthusiastic in her praise of Senator Brackett for offering the test measure, saying there had been a good deal of chatter down here about suffrage, and the Legislature wanted to know where the majority of women stood.

DEFEND WOMEN WHO VOTE.

Colorado Men Deny Statement That Suffrage Has Demoralized Them.

DENVER, Feb. 8.—The statement that the right of suffrage had demoralized the women of Colorado and that 10,000 women of the underworld controlled the elections of Denver, made by the Rev. Dr. Underhill before the City Club of New York Saturday, has caused indignation among the officials of Colorado.

Gov. John F. Shafroth, Chief Justice Steele of the Supreme Court, Isaac N. Stevens, editor and publisher of The Pueblo Chieftain, and ex-United States Senator T. M. Patterson have issued the following statement in reply:

Eighty per cent. of all the women entitled to vote in Colorado cast their votes at the last election, and of the 30,000 women who cast their ballots in Denver last Fall, not more than 400 were women of the underworld. It is a great outrage that women of our State should be so maligned, but we must content ourselves with stigmatizing such statements as false and malicious.

MRS. DE RIVERA UNMUZZLED.

Head of Woman's Club Federation Gets Mrs. Jones's Permit to Talk Suffrage.

The President of the City Federation of Woman's Clubs may talk on woman suffrage as much as she likes, for Mrs. Gilbert Jones has lifted the embargo. Mrs. Belle De Rivera, President of the City Federation, told the Society for Political Study so yesterday at its meeting at the Hotel Astor. Mrs. Jones is head of one of the three clubs in the City Federation opposed to woman suffrage. These anti-suffrage clubs have said that they did not think the President of the federation should express her views on a subject on which there was so much feeling. That was what they said at first, but, as Mrs. De Rivera said yesterday, Mrs. Jones has lifted the embargo, and she was able to talk back a little to the historian of the Society for Political Study, who does not believe in woman suffrage and said so openly.

SUFFRAGE PAPER APPEARS.

The Woman Voter Will Be Published Monthly for 5 Cents a Copy.

The first number of The Woman Voter, the official organ of the Woman Suffrage Party, was published yesterday. It is a small periodical, published monthly at 5 cents a copy and 50 cents a year. It opens with an appeal for a membership of 100,000 in the Woman's Suffrage Party, a campaign fund of $10,000, and 1,000 Election District Captains.

The names of the Assembly district leaders are given in the new magazine, and there is a calendar of coming events, among other things. The magazine is issued from the headquarters in the Metropolitan Building, 1 Madison Avenue.

HYDE GAVE CAPSULE; SWOPE SOON DIED

Nurse Tells of Convulsions That Quickly Followed a Dose of Supposed Digestive Medicine.

STRYCHNINE IN THE LIVER

That Organ Contained More Than Enough to Kill—Hyde Showed Interest in the Swope Estate.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 8.—With the testimony of Miss Pearl Keller, a nurse; Dr. Ludwig Hektoen, Mrs. Logan H. Swope, and Dr. Frank Hall in the inquest over the body of Col. Swope in Independence to-day came developments of more consequence apparently than any heretofore produced.

Miss Keller's detailed story of the last moments of Col. Swope's life produced a sensation. She had testified previously that about twenty minutes after the death of Col. Thomas Moss Hunton Dr. B. C. Hyde asked her to use her influence with Col. Swope to have him appointed administrator of the Swope estate. Mr. Hunton had been the administrator.

Then Miss Keller told of the death of Col. Swope.

"I was seated at the breakfast table when Dr. Hyde came in," she said. "He asked me if Col. Swope had eaten, and I told him that he had.

"'Then come with me,' Dr. Hyde said, and I left the table. The doctor told me then that he had brought out some digestive tablets and that he wanted Col. Swope to have one.

"'I want him to have it right now,' he told me. I got a fresh glass of water and took it upstairs with me. When we got there, Dr. Hyde took a capsule out of a small pink box he held in his hand. I tried to persuade Col. Swope to take the medicine, but he wouldn't do it. I laid the medicine and the glass down on a table and we went downstairs.

Sudden Change in Patient.

"When I came upstairs again I asked Col. Swope if he would take the medicine, and he assented. Then he took up one of the papers and told me to read the others. Suddenly a peculiar breathing sound from the bed caused me to look up. His eyes were set and wild, and the pupils were dilated. He began to tremble, and the color of his face commenced to change.

"I ran to the door and jerked it open. Mrs. Hyde was just passing.

"'Run in and tell Dr. Hyde to come here quick,' I said. It appeared to me that he was rather long in coming, and I sent another call for him. As soon as he had examined Col. Swope he said:

"'It is apoplexy, brought on by the death of Col. Hunton.'

"It was just twenty minutes after I gave Col. Swope the capsule that the convulsions came on. When Dr. Hyde came up stairs he did not do anything for Col. Swope at first, and then he suggested that I give him a hypodermic injection of one-sixtieth of a grain of strychnine every fifteen minutes for a while.

"Once, just after a convulsion, Col. Swope appeared to revive, and in that semi-conscious state he cried:

"'Oh, my God! I wish I had not taken that medicine; I wish I were dead.'

"Along toward night Dr. Hyde and I both sat on the bed, taking Col. Swope's pulse. Dr. Hyde kept saying that the Colonel was failing rapidly. I said that I could not see it. Soon after that I went to dinner, and when I returned Dr. Hyde and Mrs. Hyde were bending over the bed. Mrs. Hyde turned to me when I came in.

"'Uncle Thomas has passed away,' Mrs. Hyde said to me. 'He died so easily.'"

"Do you know of anything else that might have caused Col. Swope's death other than that capsule?" Coroner Zwart asked.

"I do not," she replied.

Strychnine Enough to Kill.

Dr. Hektoen testified that a sixth of a grain of strychnine was found in a seventh part of Col. Swope's liver. He believed there might be a grain in the entire organ. Half a grain would cause death. Traces of strychnine were found in the stomach.

Mrs. Swope testified that Dr. Hyde knew of Col. Swope's intention to give $1,500,000 to charity, and of his plan to change his will to that effect. She also said that Col. Swope had told Dr. Hyde he had planned to give Thomas Swope the largest part of his estate. She denied she entertained any ill-feeling against Dr. Hyde.

Dr. Frank Hall said he was absolutely certain that Col. Swope did not die from cerebral hemorrhage or apoplexy.

O. H. Gentry, a druggist of Independence, said he prepared the medicine for Col. Swope, which contained elixir of iron, quinine, and strychnine. The strychnine in a teaspoonful amounted to but one-one-hundred-and-eightieth grain, he said.

WOULD OUST "BATTERY DAN."

State Excise Commissioner Starts Court Proceedings Against Magistrate.

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—State Excise Commissioner Clement announced to-day that he had instituted proceedings in the Appellate Division, First Department, for the removal from office of Daniel E. Finn, known as "Battery Dan," as a City Magistrate of New York City. Finn is charged with "unjustly, unlawfully, and fraudulently discharging" defendants held for violating the liquor tax law in New York.

Commissioner Clement also charges Magistrate Finn with "unwarranted, unjust, and unlawful hostility" to the enforcement of the liquor tax law, and "a corrupt intent," all tending to show that he "is incompetent to perform and fulfill the duties of his office."

Magistrate Finn will have a hearing in New York on Feb. 18.

Magistrate Finn could not be seen last night when a reporter called at his home at 569 Broome Street. His daughter said that as her father was ill, and had been for months, he could not see reporters. She said, however, that he had not yet received the papers in the proceedings brought by Commissioner Clement.

IRELAND DENOUNCES METHODISTS IN ROME

Their Methods of Proselyting Back of Pope's Refusal to Receive Fairbanks, He Says.

HE IMPUGNS THEIR HONOR

Makes No Attack, He Says, on Other American Churches There, or on the Entire Methodist Body.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Archbishop Ireland issued a statement here to-day in which he gave reasons why the Pope could not meet ex-Vice President Fairbanks in Rome. The latter's address to the Methodist Association in Rome, the Archbishop said, meant in the Roman mind approval of that association, whose methods the Archbishop criticised severely.

The Archbishop's statement, in part, follows:

"It was not a question of Mr. Fairbanks being a Methodist or going to a Methodist church in Rome for Sunday devotions. It was a question of appearing to give the fullest approval to the work of the Methodist Association in Rome. American Methodists in Rome are active, and, I may readily say, pernicious proselyters. The Methodist Association is not in Rome to serve and meet American Methodists, but to pervert from the Catholic faith all those upon whom they can bring influence to bear.

"The purpose of the work of the Methodist Association in Rome is confessed openly. The means employed are by no means honorable. They take every advantage of the poverty of the people of Rome. The books circulated and displayed in the windows of their book stores are slanders against the Catholic faith, the Holy Pontiff at Rome, and a misrepresentation of the whole Catholic system. The success of the movement is far from adequate to the efforts put forth and the money expended. They do not make permanent Methodists of Italians. They may possibly detach pupils from the Catholic Church, and this means from all Christian things for Italians.

"A public address by a former Vice President of the United States before the Methodist Association can have no other meaning in the eyes of the Roman public than the approval by America on the propaganda of the Methodist Association. Had the Holy Father, guardian of the spiritual interests of the Catholic Church of the world, smilingly welcomed Mr. Fairbanks to an audience on the following day, in what other position would he appear to be than giving his approval to the propaganda of the Methodist Association before which the address had been given?

"There are in Rome Protestant American churches for the benefit of Americans that put forth legitimate efforts, mind their own business, and make no war on the Catholic Church. What I have said of the Methodists in Rome does not apply to the other churches there. I have in mind the Protestant Episcopal Chapel on the Via Nazionale and its former rector, Dr. Nevins, a man whom I was pleased to call a friend and whom I was always glad to meet.

"I shall leave for New York to-morrow and I shall be pleased to answer the Methodists there or in the East at any time. I cannot make it too plain that I am not attacking the entire Methodist Church, but merely the Methodist Association at Rome. I am not too old to enter a fight when the occasion requires it."

ROME, Feb. 8.—The Rev. B. M. Tipple, pastor of the Methodist Church in Rome, gave a dinner to-night in honor of Charles W. Fairbanks, the former Vice President of the United States. Ambasador Leishman was unable to attend owing to the illness of his daughter, but he sent John W. Garrett, First Secretary of the American Embassy.

Among the guests were Dr. Walling Clark, head of the Methodist organization in Italy; the Rev. Walter Lowrie, rector of the American Episcopal Church in Rome; G. R. Stuart of Virginia, and D Whitting Hill of Tennessee. The conversation at the dinner centred in the incident between Mr. Fairbanks and the Vatican.

With regard to the Pope's refusal to give an audience to Mr. Fairbanks except on condition that he withdrew from his promised address in the Methodist Church on Sunday the Vatican explains that it is customary for the Pope never to receive a personage who acts in any manner other than that of a Catholic minister in Rome.

It is pointed out also that Seth Low, the ex-Mayor of New York, was received by the Pope and afterward delivered an address in a Protestant church, like Mr. Fairbanks, which the Holy See extremely regretted.

Chamorro Takes to Woods.

MANAGUA, Feb. 8.—Gen. Chamorro has eluded three columns of the Government troops which were sent to besiege him in Boaco, and has taken to the woods. The Government forces are reoccupying the town. Boaco was captured by the insurgents under Gen. Mazis last Friday.

Jongers Has Appendicitis.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Feb. 8.—An operation for appendicitis was performed to-day on Alphonse Jongers, the portrait painter of New York.

His condition this evening was reported as favorable.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 8.—The Press bill, designed to suppress the dissemination of Anarchistic literature, was passed by the Imperial Council to-day. It requires the proprietors of newspapers and job presses to deposit with the Government a sum of money which will be forfeited if the depositor is convicted of an attempt to incite to murder or sedition or to influence the public against law and order.

PREMIER ASQUITH RETURNS.

Said to Have Decided to Take Up the Budget First.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Premier Asquith returned to London this evening. He has called meetings of the Cabinet for both Thursday and Friday, and it is expected that he will go to Brighton on Friday to confer with the King.

It is practically certain that the first business of Parliament will be the reintroduction of the budget, which the chief Liberal whip to-night predicts will be passed into law within a fortnight. It is understood that the Prime Minister has decided that the exigencies of the financial situation make this course desirable, as it is believed that the question of dealing with the veto of the House of Lords may prove a long and difficult business.

PANAMA WANTS RAILROAD.

Foreign Secretary to Discuss Pan-American Plan at Washington.

PANAMA, Feb. 8.—Samuel Lewis, Secretary of Foreign Relations, will leave here to-morrow for Washington by way of New York on a special mission from President Obaldia.

It is reported that the Secretary has been empowered to close important negotiations with the American Government, which have been pending for some months, with particular reference to the construction of a railroad from Panama to David, near the Costa Rican frontier. This is the Panama trunk of the proposed Pan-American Railway through Central America to meet the Mexican extension of the Southern Pacific. The National Assembly of Panama authorized its construction early last year.

KING GUSTAVE DOING WELL.

Physicians Say He Will Be Up Again in a Fortnight.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 8.—The condition of King Gustave, who was operated on for appendicitis last evening, was reported entirely satisfactory to-night. An official bulletin was issued at 9:30 as follows:

The King passed a quiet day and slept well. Anodynes have been unnecessary. Pulse, 56; temperature, 98.2. The wound presents no unfavorable symptoms. His Majesty's general health is satisfactory.

The regency under Crown Prince Gustave Aldolf may continue for three weeks. The Queen left Karlsruhe this evening for Stockholm.

STEPCHILD KEPT IN A CLOSET.

Pitiable Story of a Stunted Boy of Nine Comes Out In Court.

A little boy, frail and so stunted that he did not look half the nine years he lisped as his age, was offered as Exhibit A in Special Sessions yesterday, when his stepmother, Mrs. Mary Steen, was found guilty of impairing the child's health. The little boy looked up from the witness stand and told the circle of Justices, court officers, and reporters that he had been shut up in a dark closet not once, but many times, and that ever since his stepmother had taken him to the room at 493 West Twenty-second Street he had been made to sleep there.

His name is Joseph Steen, and he is the son of Thomas W. Steen, a farmer of Centreport, L. I., where there is real estate that he inherited from his mother, who died when he was only two weeks old. This property will revert to the father in the event of the child's death.

By her own testimony yesterday, the second Mrs. Steen came to New York last December because of the criticism aroused among the neighbors over her treatment of the child.

Mrs. Steen declared yesterday that her devotion to the "motherless little thing" had been constant and that she had taught him all his lessons faithfully. This was a rejoinder to a report from Centreport that the boy had never been sent to school there. As for the closet, why, he went in there to hide, she said.

Mrs. Steen was remanded to the Tombs until Feb. 15 pending an inquiry by Probation Officer Axman. The child was returned to the Gerry Society. A curious crowd gathered around the mite in the hallway, and a small collection was taken up for his benefit.

Lecture to Aid Victims.

The French branch of the Young Men's Christian Association is making an appeal for funds for the flood sufferers of France. Next Saturday evening an illustrated lecture will be given by Mrs. Frances Fearn on Queen Elizabeth of Roumania, (Carmen Sylva,) and at the close of the lecture a collection for the flood sufferers will be made. Tickets can be obtained free by addressing the Secretary of the French branch, 109 West Fifty-fourth Street.

Dennison's Insanity.

A report on the sanity of Herbert Jerome Dennison, the former prestidigitator, who is under suspicion of killing two small boys in Highbridge Park, and is now in the Tombs awaiting the Grand Jury's action for the assault of John Fredericks, was handed to Judge Rosalsky yesterday by Frank M. McGuire, visiting physician of the City Prison. The doctor, having held extended conversations with Dennison, reported that the latter made "statements all evidently of a delusionary character, both religious and persecutory, which, to the mind of the examiner, are typically expressive of a type of insanity known as paranoia."

Sackville Claimant Quits.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Ernest Henry Sackville-West withdrew to-day his petition for legal recognition of his claim to the title and estates of his father, the late Lord Lionel Sackville Sackville-West.

The defense rested on alleged proof that the petitioner's mother, Josefa Duran, was never married to the late Lord Sackville.

ATTACKS FLEXNER AT VIVISECTION DINNER

John De Witt Warner of the Antis Says Surgeon Evades Charges Against Associates

AND HELPS TO PROVE THEM

The Hon. Stephen Coleridge, Introduced as an English Martyr to the Cause, Makes Plea for the Dog.

Before 200 or more members of the New York Anti-Vivisection Society, and their guest of honor, the Hon. Stephen Coleridge, son of the late Lord Chief Justice of England, at dinner at the Plaza last night John De Witt Warner aroused much enthusiasm by attacking Dr. Simon Flexner and the Rockefeller Institute which he heads.

Mr. Warner charged Dr. Flexner with "juggling with words" in his recent defense of the institute.

Mr. Warner said that the medical profession, even its most honorable members, was given to standing between the public and its most unscrupulous members.

"High are the walls and shut the gates of the Rockefeller laboratories," he remarked, "where agony is distilled by mutilation and torment. The professional gentlemen concerned are naturally dumb as to the processes in which slow death brings mercy to the brutes. But their lay assistants sicken at their tasks, leave their service, and embody what they have seen in sworn statements so direct and detailed as to call for confession or equally definite denial.

"I have seen no statement from those directly charged, but Dr. Flexner entered the list for them. Does Dr. Flexner specifically deny a single fact? Not at all. He juggles with the word 'cruelty,' tries to belittle the witnesses, and closes with evasive denials that are practically admissions of the specific facts he dodged.

"The fact is that, until Dr. Flexner had spoken, the public might have felt that sentiment or zeal had colored the statement even of sworn witnesses. But now the veracity of these witnesses stands corroborated, and their charges sustained by the strongest of all proofs—such evasions and omissions as spell confession.

Mr. Coleridge was introduced by Mrs. Diana Belais, toastmaster and President of the New York Society, as a martyr for the cause in England. He was cordially received. He said that dogs were daily being betrayed by beings that stand to them as gods.

"The doctors like to experiment with dogs," he said, "because, they say, they can learn more from them. Indeed they can learn from them. They can learn of courage, faithfulness, loyalty, and love from them, but this is not what they want to learn. It is to find out the weight of their life blood, and whether they can graft the leg of one dog on to the body of another."

Mr. Coleridge said he would not believe that God ever intended that men should acquire knowledge at the expense of tormenting others of His creatures as animals experimented upon are tormented. If the physiologists must learn this way, he thought he had better not learn at all. The audience applauded this opinion.

Other speakers were Dr. Albert Leffingwell, not wholly opposed to vivisection; Dr. J. D. Harrigan, and Frederick R. Toombs. Prof. William James of Harvard wrote Mrs. Belais that he understood the American Medical Association was about to admit ethical responsibility for animal experimentation, and might publish some disciplinary rules.

COLERIDGE SUED FOR LIBEL.

English Experimenter Got $10,000 for Charges of Cruelty.

The career in England of the Hon. Stephen Coleridge as the Honorary Secretary and one of the most active agents of the National Anti-Vivisection Society of that country has been stormy, leading to frequent clashes with distinguished medical authorities, and on one occasion to a libel suit, resulting in a judgment for $10,000 against him.

Mr. Coleridge was sued for libel by Dr. Bayliss, a London physiologist, some years ago. He charged Dr. Bayliss in a public address with treating a dog cruelly in an operation. His opponents also point to his testimony before the Royal Commission on Vivisection, in which these questions and answers appear:

Q.—I think you told us you had never seen an experimentation yourself? A.—No.
Q.—And you never wished to see one? A.—No.
Q.—And you have no intention of seeing one? A.—No.
Q.—Have you ever seen an animal after an experiment in a physiological laboratory? A.—No. I am wholly unacquainted with the thing from personal knowledge.

Asked if he would believe scientific men of character regarding experimentation, he replied:

"Certainly not, because I think that all these experimenters have the greatest contempt for the act of Parliament. They would deny a breach of this act just as I should deny a breach of the Motor Car act. I drive a motor car, and when I go beyond the speed limit and a policeman asks me, I say 'No, I am not going beyond the speed limit.' Nothing would keep me from going beyond the speed limit except the presence of a policeman in the car, and nothing will keep an experimenter within the four corners of the act except an Inspector in the laboratory."

VISCOUNT WEDS GIRL CLERK.

Vicomte de Ravenel Makes Miss Ellen Igoe, Statistician, His Bride.

It came out yesterday that Edmond Ratisbonne de Ravenel, Vicomte, and heir to the Château de Ravenel, Department of Oys, France, was married last Saturday, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, to Miss Ellen Manning Igoe, who comes of an old Connecticut family, her home formerly having been in Hartford. Mgr. Lavelle performed the ceremony.

Miss Igoe was graduated from a girls' school three years ago. She decided upon a business career, and took up the study of typewriting. She developed herself as a statistician. The Vicomte met her in Hartford three years ago.

Miss Igoe came to New York, and obtained employment with Speyer & Co., at 24 Pine Street, as a statistician. The Vicomte called upon her frequently, and some months ago invited Miss Igoe to visit his father. Upon her arrival in France the Vicomte fell ill of typhoid fever; Miss Igoe tended him devotedly.

On account of Miss Igoe's lack of fortune, the Vicomte's father is said not to have favored the marriage. Miss Igoe returned to America, and went to work again in the financial district. The Vicomte also came back to America, got employment for a while with the Westinghouse Company, and then became the Canadian manager of Jaumont & Co., 124 East Twenty-fifth Street, makers of moving-picture films. The couple started for Montreal directly after the wedding.

MAY STOP JEFFRIES FIGHT.

Johnson's Trial for Assault Put Over Despite Counsel's Objections.

The trial of Jack Johnson, the negro prizefighter, charged with assaulting Norman Pindar, another negro, was dropped from the February calendar of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court by Justice Goff yesterday. No date was set for the trial.

James Nugent, counsel for Johnson, objected to putting the case over, and said that although Johnson was in Detroit playing a vaudeville engagement, he could be in court in this city within forty-eight hours, and wanted a speedy trial.

Johnson is scheduled to meet Jeffries for the heavy weight title on July 4 of this year. The charge against the negro is a serious one, and if found guilty, the fighter is liable to a sentence of five years. It is believed that if he is found guilty, the minimum sentence imposed would extend beyond the date set for the fight.

SPLENDID PLAY BY RACHAEL CROTHERS

In Which Mary Mannering Plays with Brilliancy and Charm.

FINE THEME WELL HANDLED

Clear-Sighted View of Difficult Problem—Mr. Richman at His Best in Excellent Cast.

"This is a man's world. Man sets the standards for women. He knows she's better than he is, and he demands that she be—and if she isn't she's got to suffer for it. That's the whole business in a nutshell."

To which answer echos "Maybe." And yet again, "Perhaps," and also, "What then?" and "What does all that prove?"

Well, for one thing, as per the caption of Miss Rachel Crothers's play, that this is a man's world. But what is isn't necessarily right, though there are a lot of people who go on believing so. However, as Miss Crothers probably knows as well as any one, this play and many others equally strong and to the point will not change conditions. However, it is a good thing to get clear thought on the subject now and then, and when, as in this case, it's a moral and a play all in one—for so often we have the former masquerading as the latter—it is doubly welcome.

The fact is that Miss Rachel Crothers has taken this somewhat well-worn—and not nearly enough worn—theme and written a remarkably interesting play about it. Never once has she made the mistake of turning preacher, never once have her deductions and her views come other than naturally out of the mouths of the characters. And these she has drawn with variety, with naturalness, and with great appeal. Moreover, she has moved them in and about a reasonable sort of story, and one suggestive of real life, in spite of the coincidental meeting and relationship, without which there would not be a play at all. The best part of it all, perhaps, from the viewpoint of its subject, is that Miss Crothers conveys an impression of sympathy with her subject, of having coolly and calmly sat down to write about it, of conveying her opinions, if not without conviction, at least without the hysteria which so often enters into the argument.

"A Man's World" is, in short, a remarkably fine little play, and one which helps to justify the hopes that were built upon the author's first work, "The Three of Us," so pleasantly remembered. Here is a deeper, broader, more ticklish subject, and it is difficult to see how it could be better handled.

Frank Ware, successful novelist and writer on the east side for the betterment of women, has an adopted child whose presence even in her more or less Bohemian surroundings has aroused suspicion, with a jealous woman to fan a small spark into a flame. About Frank, (why the masculine surname in a world where even women have some rights in this one thing at least?) loyal friends rally—a French painter, with a Gallic misunderstanding; an American playwright, who knows that he will succeed, not because his plays are good, but because the other fellows' are so bad, and a German musician, who is honestly in love with her.

The German musician, on his part, is loved by a temperamental singer whose temper gets the best of her, and who sees, or fancies she sees, in a miniature of the child a resemblance to Malcolm Gaskell, a masterful sort of person who has recently come into Frank Ware's life, who loves her, means to marry her, and is very near having his way about it. Eventually the gossip comes to the woman's ears, but not before she has mystified her lover by imagining that there has been a supposition that the child is supposed to resemble her, not, again, until she has had a moment of too brief happiness in the arms of her lover and accepted his proposal of marriage.

Then comes the inevitable disclosure—that he is the father of the child; that he was the man who, in Paris, six years before, loved and went away from the girl whom Frank Ware befriended—that the child she had been rearing was his child. He argues, and with some truth it must be said, that things that have been cannot be changed; she, on her part, only sees the rank injustice of it. And at the end they part, a somewhat too sudden parting, perhaps, and one which, after all, leaves one to ask the question—to what great end? After all, without a general consciousness of the evil, how is the wreck of two lives to mend it? To which Miss Crothers and her heroine may answer "A beginning must be made somewhere" and still be within the facts.

Briefly outlined as it must be here, this bare recital of the story can convey only an unsatisfactory impression of the play, which is not by any means the dull and morbid presentation the subject generally effects. Miss Crothers has written with charming variety, there is abundant light and shade in scenes, passages, and characters, and there are capital lines now and then, directly given or neatly turned, to add backbone and meaning to the moral of the play.

The superfluous woman, trying to find a place in the world, who believes that "one should have strict ideas even if one is broad-minded"—this alone is a character that shows more thought and understanding, that is nearer to the actual than three-fourths of what goes into many plays. And the scene between Frank Work and the jealous woman, as the latter suddenly realizes her mistake, as the two women take issue on the essential question of the woman's life, is as fine a bit of dramatic writing of its kind as often comes along. There are scenes with the child, wonderfully natural human little scenes, and there is the sentimentally appealing picture of loyalty in the three men friends to lighten the main discussion, to throw into relief the more important features of the story.

The acting, too, is in several instances much above the average. Miss Mary Mannering, with her beauty and charm never so pronounced as now, plays with a complete and wholly satisfying suggestion of every phase of the woman's character; her gentleness, her self-reliance, her earnestness, and her wholly natural and feminine capitulation, though temporary, to the dominating male; her disillusionment and regret, and then her growing strength and conviction of the right of her position, with a most adorable suggestion of kindly feeling for the child—all these things Miss Mannering conveys most admirably and without a suggestion of theatrical artificiality. Women will certainly love her in this part.

Mr. Charles Richman has possibly never played so well, with such a firm command of himself, certainly never with a finer suggestion of virility and conviction. And in a little scene of love-making which ends the first act, charmingly written and arranged, both he and Miss Mannering were delightful. An exceptionally direct and natural performance is that of Arthur Bertheley as one of the friends, the German of the trio being played with plenty of sentimental fervor by John Sainpolis, and the Frenchman having good color in the hands of Ernest Perrin. Ruth Holt Boucicault, very impressive in appearance, plays effectively, but with occasional tendency to overact, a fault possibly due to first-night nervousness.

A distinctly interesting figure is provided by Helen Ormsbee, who marks the passage from eccentric humor to pathetic exposition of a lonely, helpless life with convincing fervor and emotion. And a more delightful child than Mark Short, whose part is long, could scarcely be imagined.

MURDER MADE CLEAR BY THIRD DEGREE

Cross-Questioned for 18 Hours, Emilya Sarapuu Tells Police Johansen Killed His Wife.

SAYS HE CONFESSED TO HER

Woman Stolidly Denied All Knowledge of the Crime After Her Arrest—On the Trail of Johansen.

Eighteen hours of what is known in police parlance as the "third degree" resulted yesterday in breaking down Miss Emilya Sarapuu, the stolid young Eastlander, who was found by the police in an apartment furnished by August Johansen, at 267 West 146th Street. In a confession, made through an interpreter, she informed the police that Johansen had told her that he murdered his wife, Sophie, whose body was found buried beneath the floor of a basement apartment at 178 West Ninety-fourth Street on Monday morning.

The police believe that they will be able to find Johansen within the next few hours, for he is believed to be in hiding in this city, either in the home of some friend in the Finnish colony, on the upper east side, or in Brooklyn, where, according to Emilya Sarapuu, he also has many acquaintances.

From the time Miss Sarapuu was arrested the police considered her the key to the situation, as they had learned that she was with Johansen on Thursday and again on Friday, in the West Ninety-fourth Street house, helping him pack preparatory to the hurried moving of his effects to 146th Street.

Assistant District Attorney Henry A. Stickney retained T. von S. Petersen, head of Petersen's Detective Bureau. Mr. Petersen speaks most of the dialects of Finland and of the neighboring countries. At 3 o'clock Monday afternoon he took the Sarapuu woman in hand. And from that hour until midnight he continued questioning her without pause. Still she would admit nothing. The woman was placed in a cell at the Mercer Street Police Station for the night. And at 9 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Petersen resumed his task. No breakfast was served to Miss Sarapuu. All that was given to her was a glass of water.

Accompanied by Capt. Carey, the interpreter conducted Miss Sarapuu to the basement of the Ninety-fourth Street house, where the murder was committed. Then they took her to the Morgue to look at the body of Mrs. Johansen. Miss Sarapuu recoiled at the sight. She admitted there that she recognized the body as that of Mrs. Johansen, but that was all.

They then took her to the office of Assistant District Attorney Stickney, in the Criminal Court Building, and the inquisition went on there.

Still she was mute when it came to telling anything about Johansen. But shortly after noon Mr. Petersen requested to be left alone with the woman. For two hours he plied her with questions. She was beginning to feel the effects of the strain and of the lack of food. Along toward 3 o'clock she broke down completely and wept.

"I am ready to tell all I know," she said to Petersen. And then, according to the police, she told of Johansen's having confessed to her of having committed the murder.

"I met Johansen about two months ago, when he and his wife were living in Seventh Avenue," said she. "We both came from Eastland, and it was only natural we should become friendly in a city where there are not many Eastlanders. I liked Mrs. Johansen very much. While I was living with Mrs. Markowitz, at 228 East 112th Street, I had all my mail sent to the Johansen home, and Mr. Johansen used to bring it to me.

"Last Thursday Mr. Johansen came to me and said that his wife had gone back to the old country and that he intended to move away from the Ninety-fourth Street house. He asked me to help him pack up and move, and I agreed to do so. That evening we packed up the furniture, and on Friday the moving men came and took the things to the 146th Street house.

"Mr. Johansen told me that he wanted me to stay and keep house for him until the time came for him to sail for Eastland to join his wife. I had no suspicion that Mrs. Johansen had not really gone away, because she had told me about two weeks before that she intended going back to Eastland soon. She had come into some money from the death of her brother, who was killed on a railroad in New Jersey.

"All day Friday we worked around the new flat. Mr. Johansen went out for a couple of hours. He seemed very nervous, but I thought perhaps he had been drinking. On Saturday afternoon Mr. John Corse, who owns the Ninety-fourth Street house, came and wanted to see Mr. Johansen, but he was out. Saturday evening Mr. Johansen was very much excited upon learning that Mr. Corse had been there. He walked about the kitchen, throwing his hands about, and after a while sat down and began to cry.

"Then he told me that he had killed his wife. I thought he was either intoxicated or crazy. I didn't believe him.

"On Monday morning early Mr. Johansen borrowed $2 from me and said he was going out. He said he couldn't tell when he would be back, and told me to look out for myself. I do not think he could have had much money, or he would not have borrowed from me. He hadn't come back up to the time the police arrested me."

After her confession the woman was taken to the House of Detention, where she will be held pending the search for Johansen.

An autopsy was performed on the body of Mrs. Johansen yesterday, and it was found that she had been strangled and that her skull had been fractured.

Broker Tracy to Plead To-day.

William Warner Tracy, head of the bankrupt firm of Tracy & Co., stock brokers, surrendered before Supreme Court Justice Goff yesterday, and to-day will plead to a charge of grand larceny.

Heinze Stock Theft Case Up.

The troubles of the Windsor Trust Company, involved in the appearance on the market last Summer of some copper stock, which F. Augustus Heinze declared was left at that institution as collateral, will be heard in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court next week, when Donald L. Persch, Charles Katz, and Walter Clark will be tried for grand larceny.

The case was moved from the General Sessions calendar yesterday with the consent of District Attorney Whitman. Assistant District Attorney Nott will prosecute. It is charged that these three men shared among them the booty which followed the sale of $110,000 worth of stock given as security for a $50,000 loan.

TWO DIE THROUGH JEALOUSY.

Ex-Convict Shoots Wife, Who Had Left Him, Then Himself.

Infuriated because he believed his wife had transferred her affections to another, Herman Strauss, son of a hotel proprietor at Rockaway Park, killed the woman and then himself yesterday morning in the flat of Mrs. Mary English at 204 East Twenty-first Street. Strauss's wife, who was 19 years old, had sought refuge in Mrs. English's rooms and her husband had pursued her there.

Strauss was released last Saturday from Elmira Reformatory, where he had served ten months for the theft of a gold watch and necklace. The theft occurred three days after his marriage, and it was perpetrated at the home of a family with whom his wife had obtained employment. After Strauss was sent to Elmira his wife at first visited him and assured him of her devotion to him. She asserted a firm belief in his innocence. After a time her visits ceased, and one of Strauss's friends confided to him a suspicion that his wife no longer loved him.

Upon his release Strauss went at once to look for her. She had moved from the flat where he had installed her. He found her late Saturday night in the apartment of Mrs. Kate Noonan on the ground floor of 204 East Twenty-first Street.

She refused to return to him and he exchanged his overcoat and umbrella for an old-fashioned English bull-dog revolver. With this concealed in his pocket, he went to the English flat, and, when the door was opened dashed madly about looking for his wife. He found her preparing breakfast in the kitchen. She evidently was bending over the stove when Strauss crept up behind her and fired a bullet into her neck. The bullet pierced the jugular vein and she fell dying. As Strauss was about to turn the revolver upon himself a roomer of Mrs. English's looked in. When he saw the revolver he yelled and ran. Strauss pulled the revolver trigger, but the bullet went into the ceiling of the kitchen. Then he sat on the floor, placed the weapon at his temple and fired again. This time the bullet took effect. When Policeman Dalzell appeared a few minutes later in response to calls for help, he found husband and wife dead, side by side.

Fined $10 for Using Invalid Transfer.

William Devall, sexton of the Park Presbyterian Church, at Eighty-sixth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, was convicted in Special Sessions yesterday and fined $10 for using a discarded street car transfer.

TWO KILLED IN RACE RIOT.

Negroes Shot in Fight with Whites in Tennessee Labor Camp.

CHATTANOOGA, Feb. 8.—Two negroes were killed in a race riot at Hale's Bar, Lock and Dam, a labor camp twenty miles below Chattanooga, on the Tennessee River, early this morning. Ill-feeling between the white and black employes of the lock and dam contractors had been growing for several days, and an assault upon one of the negro laborers by several white men yesterday brought matters to a climax.

After an exchange of shots between the negroes and five policemen, rushed by train from Chattanooga, and a squad of special deputies, the trouble was quelled. None of the white men was killed or wounded. The negroes, who had taken the most active part in the trouble retreated up the river, and the Sheriff of Marion County is trying to capture them.

Flowers in the Slums.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the New York City branch of the National Plant, Flower, and Fruit Guild, held yesterday at the home of Mrs. James Roosevelt, 47 East Sixty-fifth Street, Dr. E. R. L. Goud presiding, elected these officers: Honorary President, Mrs. James Roosevelt; President, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Vice Presidents, Mrs. John Wood Stewart, Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont, and Miss Annie Leary; Treasurer, Dr. E. R. L. Gould; Secretary, Mrs. Van Valzah Hayes; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. George E. Paul.

Mme. Gadski, the opera singer, Jacob A. Riis, and the Rev. Dr. Silcer made addresses. If funds are forthcoming the New York City branch will place 2,000 window boxes this Spring.

Writ Halts Phenix Bank Case.

A writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States halted proceedings in the action of the Phenix National Bank against James M. Waterbury and Chauncey Marshall, which is being argued in the courts of this State. The writ of error holds that the State Court of Appeals improperly construed a Federal statute.

Commerce Chamber for Subway Plan.

The Public Service Commission received yesterday a communication from the Chamber of Commerce approving the plan of building rapid transit lines on the assessment basis in the outlying districts. The Chamber indorsed the plan at a recent meeting on the report of its own committee on rapid transit.

WHAT IS THE INDUCEMENT?

It would be interesting to know exactly what President TAFT thinks is the inducement for corporations engaged in considerable trade to take out charters under the bill he has proposed to Congress. On the face of it the inducement he seems to have in mind is that there will be only one instead of forty-six masters to regulate their affairs. But what is the nature of the regulation to be exercised by the one master?

It is defined, or at least is included, in the Sherman anti-trust law. The President makes it quite clear that he does not intend, and that he has not the power, to abate a jot or tittle of that law. Some of the provisions of that law are defined under the proposed act, but they are not moderated and there is no assurance that the provisions not defined will be suspended or ignored. Yet jurists of the highest rank, together with Mr. TAFT'S predecessor—who cannot be said to be opposed to strict regulation—have declared that no corporation working on a large scale could do business under the explicit terms of that law. Since it is not to be repealed, since there is no suggestion that it shall be amended, since it cannot be waived, what is the gain to corporations to come under the proposed National law, unless it be in the fact that they can more readily be prosecuted if a bureau of the Federal Government is in official possession of their reports and has access to their records? It looks as if Mr. TAFT not only desires to spread his net in the sight of the bird, but to point out to the bird that it will be permanently a captive if it will voluntarily step into the meshes of the net.

AN IRISH GOVERNMENT.

The theoretic basis of the British Parliamentary system has been the division of the electorate between two great parties, one or the other in power and its opponent seeking to displace and succeed it. When the party in power finds itself unable to command a majority in the Legislature, a dissolution of the Commons and an appeal to the people follow as a matter of course, and the people are supposed to decide primarily the one question on which the failure to command a majority occurred. The English writers are usually full of distrust and even contempt for the European nations which split up into "groups" and make a clean-cut issue for the elections impracticable.

But at the present moment the United Kingdom finds itself in a situation quite as confused and perplexing, which may prove as baffling as any French Assembly or German Reichstag has been obliged to face. The recent elections return Mr. ASQUITH and his Government without a Liberal majority over all, with only an insignificant plurality, and dependent upon the support of the Irish Nationalists for any policy it may try to carry out. If the Irish Nationalists were as completely organized and as efficiently led and the sentiment in Ireland were as strong and united as in the days of PARNELL, it would hardly be exaggeration to speak of the present Government as essentially an Irish Government. If the dominant Irish party were compactly arrayed for the enforcement of definite terms, it would, on the face of the returns, be able to impose them. There are serious difficulties in the path of such a policy. The Redmond Nationalists are bitterly opposed by a minority of independent Nationalists under the leadership of Mr. O'BRIEN and Mr. HEALY, the latter one of the most skillful Parliamentary tacticians in any party. This minority can make itself felt, especially with regard to the budget, which has two features extremely unpopular in Ireland, those taxing the brewery and the liquor interests. Mr. O'BRIEN is openly accusing Mr. REDMOND of selling the Irish vote to the Liberals by the "blackest" treason since the act of union. In the face of the opposition it is doubtful if Mr. REDMOND could deal with Mr. ASQUITH on the basis of support for the budget in return for Home Rule.

On the other hand, Mr. ASQUITH, if he undertakes to deal with the Irish in this way, will find his Liberal supporters more than doubtful, and the curious condition may arise in which he cannot carry his budget in its original force and scope without Irish support, and cannot pay the price that support is held at. From such a state of things it is plain that any effective measure of Home Rule from this Parliament is hardly within sight. Could we infer that this combination of circumstances would lead to a compromise giving to Ireland the greatest possible control of her own affairs short of practical independence, all true friends of Ireland would have reason to rejoice. An attempt at this was made three years ago in Mr. BIRRELL'S plan for an Irish Council, to which were to be given the chief branches of the Government and an independent treasury, but it was rejected by the Irish themselves. Whether it is possible to devise another plan acceptable to the Irish it is impossible now to say, but the aim of the plan is sound. It is generally recognized among all parties in England by the more far-sighted leaders that the Irish "problem" is a problem for the Irish, and that the safety and duty of England lie in providing a way in which the Irish may be free to solve it.

At best the task will be tremendously difficult, and whatever mode of dealing with it may be evolved, there will be faults and errors in following it and serious trouble flowing from it. But it is to be borne in mind that great changes have been wrought in Ireland in the last two decades, from which much may be hoped. The system of land tenure has been practically revolutionized, and opportunity given to multitudes of tenants to become holders of land. All depends upon what will be the capability of these landholders in developing the resources placed within their reach. It will be a long job and a tough one. All that can reasonably be asked or hoped is that there shall be progress, however slow and painful. Essentially, now, we should say that the Irish question is rather economic and social than political, and from that point of view the impossibility of soon securing the kind of Home Rule which the Nationalists urge is not vitally unfortunate.

POLITICS AND POST OFFICES.

The department's policy of recommending the reappointment of Presidential Postmasters who have proved their efficiency and of retaining Postmasters at offices of the fourth class so long as they render satisfactory service has had a decidedly beneficial effect. This policy involves the requirement that a Postmaster shall give his personal attention to the duties of his office and insures his co-operation with the department in improving the service. The recognition of efficiency as the controlling factor in determining tenure of office cannot fail to raise the standard of the supervisory service, just as the merit system has improved the work of the rank and file.

This very clear and sensible statement of the operation of sound business principles in the Post Office Department is taken from the latest report of the Postmaster General. It amounts to a definite pledge on his part and on the part of the Administration.

The current number of Good Government, the journal of the Civil Service Reform League, cites in detail the facts as to how this pledge has been carried out in two offices of importance in this neighborhood, Yonkers and Brooklyn. In each a Postmaster of acknowledged "efficiency" who had rendered "satisfactory" service has been displaced and a politician, selected and urged by politicians, has been appointed in his place. In the case of Mr. ROBERTS in Brooklyn it is hardly necessary to say that the hand of Mr. TIMOTHY WOODRUFF has been plainly in evidence. The former Postmaster, Mr. GEORGE H. ROBERTS, has served acceptably for two terms. We do not say that he has made his office all that it ought to be, but he has done as well as he could under the policy of our Government to spend money in the country and let the great offices get on as best they can. He has been diligent and painstaking, and he has refused to do the politicians' work. Mr. PARSON at Yonkers has a like record. Both have exactly and fully met the standard set by the Post Office Department in the passage quoted from the Postmaster General's report. Both, instead of the "reappointment" promised, receive dismissal; which may be a small matter to them, but is a matter of importance to the thousands whose business they have done well.

MISREPRESENTATIVES OF LABOR.

The annual bill for legalizing the boycott—that is, for exempting labor organizations from the anti-trust law—made its appearance in the House of Representatives promptly after the assessment of damages by the jury in the Hatters' case. It cannot be said that the time was well chosen, or that there is any general public demand for such a statute. There is even doubt that the unionists themselves, as distinguished from their officers, want such a law. The ground for doubting it is the belief that the unionists are much the same sort of flesh and blood as the rest of us, and such formal action in support of the belief as that just taken by the Knights of Labor. At their convention in Albany the Knights adopted formal resolutions opposing all > amendments to the Sherman anti-trust law which would exempt labor organizations from the provisions thereof, as such exemption would confer upon the labor trust the right to boycott, and any legislation which seeks to deprive one class of citizens of rights, privileges, or immunities accorded to any other class would be opposed to and subversive of the fundamental principles of equal rights and equal justice on which our Government is based.

That puts it pretty well, and the Canadians have a fair grasp of the situation also. In connection with President GOMPERS'S invitation to join his International Federation of Labor the Provincial Workingmen's Association of Canada adopted a resolution condemning the methods of the boycott as having "consequences which are abhorrent to the law-abiding people of Canada, involving hunger, misery, riot, and bloodshed." That, too, is good doctrine, and it is possible to show that it is held by a considerable and respectable body of opinion within the Federation itself. Such sentiments were expressed at the last meeting of the Federation by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Having writhed under the lash of GOMPERS, the Brotherhood resolved:

> The Executive Council of the Federation have been hailed as martyrs of judicial tyranny, while they themselves are practicing iron autocracy never before duplicated in the history of unionism. * * * The Executive Council of the Federation has placed the American labor movement in an inconsistent and ridiculous position; they are appealing from a United States Court decision on the ground that it abrogates their constitutional rights, and in turn they have enjoined the majority of the electrical workers of the United States and Canada from exercising their constitutional rights.

Fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind. Those who have felt the boycott are willing that it should be forbidden against all others if that is necessary to secure their own exemption. Mr. GOMPERS'S plea for the boycott as a sacred right when exercised by labor does not cover the ground of a boycott against labor. In short there are not two classes of boycott, good and bad. All boycotts are bad, and are recognized as such by every one who has been boycotted, or is in danger of being boycotted. That includes all those who work for wages or who pay wages. The boycott is a double-edged tool, and it has cut Mr. GOMPERS badly.

THE SUFFRAGE REFERENDUM.

Senator BRACKETT, with an air of perfect solemnity, no doubt, introduced in the Senate yesterday a bill providing for a special "election" on the day previous to the general election next Fall, "at which all women over 21 years may vote on the question of whether they shall have the full right of suffrage."

As this measure is open to grievous misconception, it is proper to explain that the vote taken, as provided, would determine nothing save whether the women wanted to become legal voters. It is merely a special referendum to the women of the State over the age of 21 upon that question alone. Unfortunately for the suffragists, a majority vote, or even a unanimous vote of all the women, in favor of the grant would not secure it. Male voters would have to pass upon that afterward. The Constitution, as it happens, confers the privilege of voting for elective officers and upon questions submitted to the people upon male citizens alone. After women had by their vote declared that they demand the suffrage, it could be accorded to them only by a joint resolution amending the Constitution, passed by two successive sessions of the Legislature, and then ratified by the people—meaning those male citizens now having the suffrage.

It would be a mighty interesting test. How would it result? Many women and some men are engaged in an active agitation for woman suffrage. There is an organized opposition, perhaps not quite so active. But the number of women who by organization, by voice, and by agitation are either favoring or opposing woman suffrage is quite insignificant compared with the total number of women in the State. The silent mass would determine the issue on Senator BRACKETT'S "election" day. There is an impression which it would require a great deal of evidence to remove, that most women, a very large majority of them, indeed, do not want the ballot, and look with disfavor upon the suffrage movement. This majority might indicate their disfavor by remaining away from the polls on referendum day. The total vote for and against cast by those who are actively engaged in promoting or opposing the movement would not be very impressive, we imagine. The Legislature might decline to consider it as a "mandate."

But what is Senator BRACKETT'S motive? Is he a suffragist, or is it merely peace that he seeks? Does he, like so many other men, long for rest and quiet? His action in introducing the bill is at least open to that construction. Many men when approached by a suffragist with menace in her eye and command in her voice, demanding to know whether they are for or against giving votes to women, reply that they have no objection if all the women want the vote. This is, of course, a miserable evasion, and all the suffragists know it. One gentleman of prominence in this community, when his signature was demanded for a suffrage petition, replied that he would sign on two conditions, (1) that when suffrage was given to women it should be taken away from the men; (2) that all women over 40 should have two votes apiece. He was instantly set down as a scoffer, which he probably was, though there is a subtlety in these conditions which few men and fewer women will perceive.

If Senator BRACKETT cherishes the hope that his referendum would put an end to the fuss about woman suffrage he deceives himself. Even if the vote of the women were against the grant, the movement would not die. Is it not a part of the feminine nature to seek more eagerly and persistently privileges that have been denied?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Insult to Intelligence.

Whether the exhibition which the anti-vivisectionists have for some weeks been conducting in this city could be successfully attacked as a show injurious to public morals, as has many a less harmful display, we do not know. That it should be suppressed, however, we have no doubt whatever, and we are strongly of the impression that the Board of Health both could and should do it in the exercise of its large powers to protect the public from anything the obvious and inevitable tendency of which is to spread disease and endanger life.

That is exactly what the anti-vivisectionists are doing, so far as they are doing anything. They have fitted up a chamber of wholly imaginary horrors, and to all who enter, including many children, they tell sickening tales of crimes that are never committed and of tortures that are never inflicted. As Prof. LEE, in the letter we printed yesterday, said, "To one who is familiar with laboratory practice, the keynote of this exhibition is falsity." Therein it illustrates the characteristic common to every page of anti-vivisection literature. The followers of that strange cult are apparently incapable of telling the truth. A well-intentioned people, they have an amazing faculty for freeing their minds of facts and for substituting for them grotesque fictions, and, while keeping up a fine pretense of delicacy and sensitiveness, they coolly utter and spread broadcast the vilest slanders they can invent against men whose whole lives are unselfishly devoted to lessening the amount of pain and sorrow in the world.

It would probably be unjust to say that the anti-vivisectionists know nine-tenths of their statements to be false and the remainder exaggerations and distortions. In some mysterious way they are able to convince themselves that vivisection is useless and cruel and wrong. Those assumptions made, they accept as true any assertion supporting that view and reject any evidence controverting it. Prof. LEE instanced example after example in this exhibition, of what it is hard to call anything except deliberate and intentional misrepresentation, or, to use a simpler phrase, out-and-out lying, but the possibilities of laboriously maintained ignorance are infinite, and it is well not to use language that is too harsh. Beyond any question, however, this show is a demoralizing and degrading one, and it should not be permitted to go on.

Generosity, Wise and Unwise.

In the will of the late J. S. KENNEDY precisely the right way of giving money for philanthropic purposes was exemplified—the way which, if followed more often by rich men with generous instincts and high purposes, would not only bring greater benefits to the institutions or organizations they want to help, but would have the minor though still important effect of preventing all such ugly controversies as the one which is now shaking the very foundations of venerable Princeton and deeply grieving her unwillingly divided friends.

Mr. KENNEDY, having used his own judgment in selecting the objects of his benefactions, intrusted his gifts unconditionally to those under whose management the chosen colleges, societies, and the like had come to win his approval. He not only gave, but he gave outright. He did not insist on the building of any material and enduring monument to keep his memory alive; he did not assume to know as much about the details of present needs as do those who approach them as experts and professionals, and still less to decide the needs of the future and to keep a "dead hand" on the money he was to leave behind him.

It may be said, indeed, that it is better for an educational or charitable or scientific institution to get money on conditions than not to get it at all. That is not true; at any rate it is not always true. Many a magnificent building, dedicated to a noble purpose, bears carved over its doors a name that would have been more honored, or at least would have been more deserving of honor, if the donor had thought less of his own glory and more of the work by which he expected to be glorified. Fine buildings do not keep themselves in repair, do not make the alterations required by changing necessities, and still less do they pay the salaries of the men who alone can put the building to its intended use.

Now and then a man of rather exceptional wisdom erects a building, adequately endows it, and releases to competent Trustees full power to decide the particular ends it shall serve. In such cases the lingering element of personal vanity can be overlooked, since it does no harm. But the closely conditioned gift is not really a gift at all—it is at worst a bribe and at best a purchase, with public subordinated to private interest.

Waiting for the Mayor.

New York is confidently, though now somewhat impatiently, waiting to hear that Mayor GAYNOR has cleared up the sinister little mystery as to how it happened that two mounted policemen were transferred so soon after they had troubled the peace of certain saloon keepers more than suspected of having political and other influence.

The case is one in which the Mayor would see, more clearly and promptly than did Commissioner BAKER, the legitimacy of public interest. He has no tender regard for police secrets and the indications are obvious that he is moving, with the deliberation imposed by his heavy responsibilities, toward a clearing up and settlement of the whole matter. Whether he is to vindicate the action taken or to condemn it is a question of no consequence, since it is certain that he will do neither on less than reasons really good and sufficient.

The chances are that, passing behind the curiously irrelevant question why CUNNINGHAM and KEENAN made the arrests they did when they did, the Mayor will raise really relevant inquiries—for instance, "Was there such violation of the law as to justify the arrests?" "Had this violation been long continued?" "If so, why were the arrests so long delayed?" Those problems once solved, probably the question as to whether the arrests and the transfers had a relation of cause and effect as well as one of time will answer itself.

And Commissioner BAKER is ill-advised when he censures the reporters for collecting and the newspapers for printing rumors about this case. Rumors are as much news as are facts—when presented as rumors and not as facts—and they are far from always false.

Guardianship Laws.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The four States where women vote have an equal guardianship law, due to the developed characters of free men and women. The anti-suffragists of Massachusetts petitioned the Legislature against the passing of such a bill, where for fifty-five years the suffragists struggled to have it made a law.

Because a vicious system has produced its inevitable demoralizing results, shall we therefore carefully maintain the system so as to get yet more results?

DUPLICATES REBEL COIN.

Owner Paid 75 Cents for 50-Cent Piece Like $5,000 Specimen.

Having read in THE TIMES yesterday an account of a silver half dollar of the Confederate States, said to be worth $5,000 as the only metal coin of the Confederacy now in existence, Sol I. Heller of the firm of Heller & Co., 35 East Twelfth Street brought a duplicate of this coin to THE TIMES office yesterday. Only four of the coins were minted in 1861, and all but the one described in THE TIMES were thought to have been lost.

Mr. Heller said that ten years ago he acquired the coin from a professor in a Southern college, who, through some accident, found himself temporarily without other money than the Confederate half dollar. The professor wanted only 50 cents for it, but Mr. Heller gave him 75 cents. Some time ago a man to whom he showed the coin offered him $50 for it.

"No," said Mr. Heller, "if it is worth $50 it must be worth more."

Learning now that a similar coin is worth $5,000, he says he is fonder of the coin than ever before. He wanted to find out more about his rare silver piece, and was referred to the New York Numismatic Society, at 156th Street and Broadway.

There he was told that the coin was a reproduction, a "restrike" from the original die. But Mr. Heller said he would hold on to it and find out more about it.

The Rev. M. J. McLeod to Move Here.

The Consistory of the Collegiate Church (Reformed Church in America) announced yesterday that the Rev. Malcolm J. McLeod of Pasadena, Cal., had accepted a call to the pastorate of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street, and that his service would begin on May 1.

POPULATION OF THE EARTH.

Finds Room for Many Times Present Number of Human Beings.

Undoubtedly many of your readers who noticed the letter from me, in which I stated that this planet could easily support at least 18,000,000,000, or twelve times as many human beings as now, thought that to be impossible, and therefore gave up thinking seriously about it. But as the question of human life seems to me to be the most important of all, I wish again to say a few words, especially to the skeptics.

It is a fact that Belgium already has 630 people to every square mile, and that Saxony has 777 to every square mile. The world at large, and especially the United States, (second to none in fertility,) which has only twenty-eight people to the square mile, ought to wake up and wonder when it is told that Japan can show a population of 2,277 to the square mile, that on two and one-half acres are comfortably fed, housed, and clad families of twelve, besides providing for a cow, small donkey, and two pigs. This goes to show that Japan could have 8,072 people on every square mile of cultivated land, or nearly five people to the acre.

I am now sure that, when men know where to place themselves and use the natural resources rightly it would be an easy matter to keep a population on earth of five to the acre of its fertile land, which is now about 18,092,288,000 acres, to say nothing of the vast areas which could be made fertile by irrigation and draining. This would mean 90,461,440,000 instead of 1,300,000,000, (the present population.) With thirty-three years, (the average life length of man,) this furthermore means that in 100 years three times and in 1,000 years thirty times as many, or 2,668,843,200,000 more human beings, could enjoy life on earth than if only the present population was kept up. What it would amount to for the endless future cannot even be imagined.

MUSICAL EDUCATION.

Comes High with Grand Opera Records from $3 to $7.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A little while before Christmas an accident laid me up at home with a disabled leg, and from a man weighted with seasonal responsibilities I was transformed into an eager, craving child. My burdens were assumed by a better half, among them a commission to Santa Claus for a phonograph.

Christmas morning saw the thing in my stocking, with a choice selection of popular records, and the poor invalid in the apartment overhead was forced to share the source of my content. After a bit I was seized with a sneaking fancy for further variety, and the cut-price inducements of a department store lured me on. That experiment tried out left me appetized for something higher—something more classical than "Nigger Loves His 'Possum," and I graduated to light opera.

But now comes the tragedy. I am up against the real thing—grand opera—at $3 to $7 per, and when I feel my pockets I realize that I am a man again with responsibilities increased manifold by a family of "records"—and more to come. Don't listen to the siren voice of a talking machine! TROUBLED.

German National Anthem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is commonly thought in this country that "The Wacht am Rhein" is the German national anthem, and great was the surprise at the recent Hudson-Fulton Celebration when the band played the medley of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," which it was not aware is not only ours and the English national anthem, but the German also. It is the first song the children learn in school, and it is sung and played on all celebrations and struck up when or wherever the Emperor appears, and is known all over the world as "Heil Dir im Siegerkranz." Eggs and Photographs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In considering photographs at $8 and $10 per dozen, respectively, the latter are claimed by one correspondent as the work of an artist, the former—well, it is inferred that they are made by anything but an artist. Let us consider something else a moment. At a well-known downtown restaurant you can have two boiled eggs for 15 cents; in a certain hotel uptown they charged 65 cents for the same number. Were the latter boiled by an "artist" in eggs? Only a person of the most "artistic temperament" could have told which were the better. R. A. DIX.

VINDICATED.

(President Roosevelt always called him "Gif."—Testimony before the Ballinger Investigating Committee.)

Ballinger called him Pinchot,
That was before the fuss;
Maybe Taft called him Gifford,
All of it's news to us;
Both of which names they called him
Sometime before the tiff,
But Theodore loved him better,
Theodore called him "Gif."

Ballinger called him Mister,
Oh, it was cold and curt!
He was not used to being Treated that way—it hurt.
Even Taft's way of speaking
Must have seemed harsh and stiff,
For all of the years before them
Theodore called him "Gif."

Ballinger may have called him
Names that are not in print,
Some of the terms, it may be,
Take on a lurid tint.
Surely, though, it was cruel,
Cruel the headsman's biff,
When all the years before them
Theodore called him "Gif."

FROM BERMUDA ICEBOUND.

Packet Orotava Runs Into an Arctic Day Near the Land of Palms.

The Royal Mail steam packet Oratava, which arrived here yesterday from Bermuda, twenty-four hours late on account of the stress of weather, came up the harbor from the Quarantine station at the head of a snow-white squadron of steamships, looking as if she had just returned from a polar expedition instead of the land of palms and lillies. From truck to keel and stem to stern she was a mass of ice and snow, brilliant in the morning sun.

Snow and ice were two feet thick on the promenade deck, and the signal halyards of quarter-inch line were the size of a towrope. From the upper deck icicles six to ten feet long hung like white-painted stanchions, while the open bridge, where the officers stood, was festooned with fancy garlands woven by the frost. Capt. W. J. Dagnall was too tired to talk, after being thirty-six hours on the bridge, and left Chief Officer Tibbits to tell the yarn.

"We left Bermuda on Saturday, Feb. 5, at 10 A. M., when the sun was shining brightly," said the chief, "and Mark Twain was standing on the quay in his white suit, waving his hand to all the pretty girls as the tender went off to the ship.

"Shortly after leaving port a strong southwest wind sprang up from the sea. At 4 bells we ran into a thunderstorm, accompanied by large hailstones and forked lightning that lit up the lowering sky like a comet. This was followed by torrents of sleet, and by the morning the wind had increased to a gale with a heavy, confused sea.

"The wind blew hard on Monday and the snow fell in big flakes. The passengers enjoyed the novelty and pelted each other on the promenade deck with snow balls. It was the worst snowstorm I have ever seen at sea, except once on a voyage in a clipper ship beating out to the westward around Cape Horn."

The fruit steamship Ida Cuneo from Port Antonio, which followed the Orotava up, had experienced the same storm and came in sparkling.

The steamer Philadelphia of the Red D Line, which left San Juan on Feb. 2, encountered the storm on Sunday in the Gulf Stream and had to stop for sixteen hours. The temperature of the water in the Gulf Stream was 68, and the Captain ordered the chief engineer to pump it up to thaw the ice on deck and around the winches.

DR. ROBNETT'S TRIAL ENDS.

Found Guilty of Swearing, but Guiltless of Assault, It Is Said.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—The court-martial of Passed Assistant Surgeon A. H. Robnett of the United States Navy was finished with the close of to-day's session. It is understood that the verdict was against Dr. Robnett on one of the two charges, and the second was not considered. Upon the charge of having used profane language in conversation over the telephone with Dr. Edward S. Cowles, the complainant, Dr. Robnett was found guilty. The other specification charging Dr. Robnett with having been a party to a breach of naval etiquette and an assault on Dr. Cowles by Paymaster Auld on Dec. 11, was not considered, as there was no evidence connecting him with it.

The extreme penalty which could be imposed in the case of Dr. Robnett is the loss of some numbers in his line for promotion, and a reprimand officially spread on his record in the service. It is believed by the officers at the Charlestown Navy Yard that the first of the two punishments will not be imposed, and that Dr. Robnett will suffer nothing more serious than a reprimand from the Secretary of the Navy.

ROOSEVELT TROPHIES SHIPPED

Smithsonian Institution Learns That Skins and Skeletons Are on Way.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Edmund Heller, one of the scientists with former President Roosevelt in Africa, has written to Dr. Charles D. Walcott, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, from Kative, Uganda, under date of Dec. 27 last, announcing that the expedition had shipped from Nairobi specimens secured from about Mount Kenia, the Northern Guaso Nijiro River, and the Guaso Ngishu Plateau.

The shipment, Mr. Heller writes, includes forty-eight barrels of skins in brine, twelve large cases of skulls and skeletons of large mammals and several cases of birds, small mammals, and other specimens. The skins of three elephants are included in the collections, one in three sections and the other two in five, each piece being packed in a separate barrel. The authorities of the Smithsonian are advised that the elephant skins be dried as soon as possible after their arrival, as there is danger of disintegration if they are left in the brine for any great length of time.

"At the present time we have accomplished four days of our safari through Uganda," Mr. Heller writes, "and the Colonel has added several new bucks to the collection. Every one of the party is in good health, and we anticipate good results and a very intersting journey down the Nile."

UNDERWRITERS LOSE SUIT.

Court Decides for Metropolitan Trust—Bond Payments Were Resisted.

Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court directed a verdict yesterday in favor of the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York against Alfred Skitt, an underwriter who had interposed a technical defense. The case had been on trial two days. Austen G. Fox represented the trust company and Herbert Barry the defendant.

The case will be a precedent for several others which the trust company has pending against other underwriters on the same transaction, the loan of $400,000 to Charles E. Ertz on certain bonds. There were forty underwriters, several of whom took up the bonds when Ertz failed to accept the bonds during the panic of 1907. Payment was resisted on the ground of usury, and it was alleged that the coupons had been disposed of irregularly.

MORE CUTS IN CITY PAY ROLLS

Saving of $50,000 a Year in Tenement and Dock Departments.

Further pay roll cuts were made yesterday in three city departments which will represent an annual saving of more than $50,000.

The total number of employes laid off was 261. They include thirty-five clerks in the Tenement House Department, 145 men in the Dock Department, and eighty-one in the Bureau of Highways in the Bronx. The majority of them received small salaries, those in the Dock Department whom Borough President Miller laid off being, for the most part, laborers.

Two of the dismissals by Dock Commissioner Tomkins were Dock Masters, at $2,100 a year each.

The Board of Water Supply also laid off sixteen employes, but at the same time raised the salaries of six engineers, the increases averaging from $500 to $1,500 a year, so that no saving was effected.

Honor Dean Van Amringe.

Dean John Howard Van Amringe of Columbia University who in June will retire from the post he has held for many years, was honored last night when a large portrait of him painted by John W. Alexander was presented to the Columbia University Club at 18 Gramercy Park. The presentation was preceded by a dinner, at which more than a hundred members of the alumni, with several Trustees and members of the Faculty, were present.

$6,000 Job for Albert E. Hadlock.

Controller Prendergast appointed Albert E. Hadlock of New Brighton, S. I., yesterday as head of the law and adjustment division of [illegible] office. The place pays $6,000 a year.

THE MAYOR OUTLINES MORE NEW REFORMS

WOULD DROP PERSONAL TAX

Present System Unjust and Brings in Little, He Tells Purdy—Wants Damage Award Reviewed.

Mayor Gaynor devoted yesterday to writing letters to the heads of city departments on matters coming under their jurisdiction. Among others he wrote to Lawson Purdy, President of the Tax Board, declaring that there must be reform in the method of levying personal taxes. He suggested that this system of local taxation be done away with entirely. The Mayor declared that if the amount of money now obtained by the city in this way was added to the real estate taxes it would only slightly increase the tax rate, and pointed out that most persons who paid personal taxes were included in the realty rolls.

Fulfills Promise to Reform Taxes.

The Mayor promised in the campaign that he would make extensive changes in the tax system if elected. In his letter the Mayor says:

> I am receiving daily complaints of persons whose names are put on the assessment rolls this year for personal taxation, although they have no personal property liable to taxation. This great annoyance has been going on for years. Many have been driven to establish their legal residence outside of the city by it, and in that way their votes are lost in our city elections. I am aware that you have lessened this evil, for we have worked in accord to that end in past years. But it is impossible to do away with it under the present crude and unscientific statute providing for the taxation of personal property in this State, including money in terms, which is a medium for the exchange of property. The teeth of this statute have been constantly filed down by assessing officials all over the State.
>
> No law can be enforced effectually against the will of the community. The assessing of personal property in this city is necessarily a matter of guesswork, worked out through the city directory, except in the case of estates which fall into the Surrogates' Court by death, and are thus fully exposed. These latter are taxed in full, while the personal property of others is not reached or assessed at all, or else in the most unequal manner. Such injustice calls for correction. It is really grotesque. I have before me notices of personal assessments of $10,000 and upward against persons who have no property and never had, while others rich in personal property are not even listed for personal taxation. I am not stating this in censure. The statute prescribes no test or procedure to enable the assessors to ascertain the amount of personal property owned by individuals. It leaves them to guess at it as best they can.
>
> In addition to general injustice and annoyance, and the opportunity for extortion and bribery which it presents, this loose method leads to constant disorder in our finances. Only about 50 per cent. of the taxes thus levied are collected. The result is an ever recurring annual deficit, which has to be funded and added to our permanent debt, or else relevied year after year in the annual budgets. There is such a deficit of about $30,000,000 now in process of being funded.
>
> You are of course aware that a growing number of people here, and perhaps the majority, desire to have the personal taxation of individuals done away with in this city. Others have long desired local option in respect to such taxation, and petitioned the Legislature to give it.
>
> So as to open up the subject for intelligent public discussion, will you be so good as to write to me this data: First—If such personal taxation were done away with altogether, what decimal would thereby be added to our tax rate on real estate? I understand it would be very small. Second—Whether those who pay taxes on real estate do not now pay the substantial part of the personal taxes collected. If such decimal would be insignificant, and substantially the same persons who pay the personal taxes which are collected would pay it, a case for intelligent consideration would be presented.

Mr. Purdy will submit his reply in a few days. It is understood that he is in favor of the adoption of the suggestion of the Mayor. Last year the final total personal assessment, after the swearing off, was $443,320,855. The tax rate last year was 1.678, or $16.78 on $1,000. As usual, only about half of the assessment was collected, and the income was only about $4,000,000. The addition of this to the real estate levy would have increased the tax rate only a few points and increased the amount collected for $1,000, much less than $1.

A Letter on Honest Service.

Mayor Gaynor made some interesting comments on honesty in the municipal service in a letter written to J. Edward Swanstrom, ex-Borough President of Brooklyn, on Monday, in response to a letter sent to the Mayor by him, in which he took up the improvement of late in the work of the Street Cleaning Department in Brooklyn. In the letter the Mayor said:

> I am very glad to receive your letter vouching for the fact that there has been a great improvement in the cleaning of the streets of Brooklyn. My action in placing that borough under a new deputy was taken with regret, but because I knew that the public interests required it.
>
> We have got to get rid of all this petty graft and meanness in the government of the city if we can. How discouraging it is that many men who are honest enough as they go about among us seem to feel that no such rule of honesty binds them when they get in the employ of the city.

Damage Award Must Be Cut.

Mayor Gaynor wrote another letter to the new Board of Assessors yesterday, specifying an additional case of what he believes to have been excessive award made by the old board. He said:

> "In the examination you are making of the work of your predecessors, please look into the case of the award to the National Cotton Oil Company for alleged damages to their property on Gowanus Canal, Brooklyn, by the raising of the grade of Hamilton Avenue, incident to the raising of Hamilton Avenue Bridge.
>
> "I have before me a letter of that company to the Commissioner of Bridges stating its damages to be $3,000, and offering to accept that sum in settlement. It is more than likely that the damages were much less than $3,000, or even nothing, and yet I find that your predecessors made an award of $21,882.
>
> "Such things are enough to make one lose faith in the integrity or the intelligence of government."

None of the members of the old board could be found yesterday, but at the offices of the Assessors it was explained that frequently where there was a dispute over an award and experts were brought in, the original figures were substantially increased.

500 BEGGING LETTERS A DAY.

Dr. Pearsons, Who Is Going to Give Away Remainder of Fortune, Besieged.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Since Dr. Daniel K. Pearsons of Hinsdale announced three weeks ago that he would make a general distribution of his fortune on April 14 next, his ninetieth birthday, he has received more than 500 letters daily.

Dr. Pearsons has given away $4,000,000 in a score of years and says that he will die penniless.

"Look at this room," he said in despair yesterday at the sanitarium in Hinsdale, where he is spending the Winter. In one corner lay a stack of college catalogues; in another pamphlets from religious institutions; the drawers of his desk and tables were piled with letters, many unopened, and the contents of two waste paper baskets had overflowed and lay in a heap on the floor.

"And here comes the postman," he added.

The clerk at the sanitarium entered the room with a gripsack containing 250 letters.

"I give almost nothing to individuals," Dr. Pearsons said. "It is to the colleges in the new West and in the poor sections of the South that most of my money will go.

"I have so arranged my affairs that at my death there will be not one cent to quarrel over. I don't know yet how much I shall give away in April, but it will all be to those on a list already made out."

L'ATTAQUE DU MOULIN AT THE NEW THEATRE

A composer who has been a prominent figure for twenty years in the musical life of Paris had last evening what practically amounted to his first hearing in New York. The composer is Alfred Bruneau, and the work by which he was made known here was his opera "L'Attaque du Moulin," which was given at The New York Theatre.

"L'Attaque du Moulin" has been given a good many times in Paris, as have some of his other operas; and these have shown vitality enough to make the composer a force in modern music to be reckoned with. It could hardly be said that from a musical point of view the opera made a deep impression last evening, or that it disclosed a strongly original or individual power on the part of its composer. The strongest portion of the opera is in its last act. Its greatest effect, however, is made through the excellence of its libretto. This is constructed with much skill, in presenting truly dramatic situations and finely felt emotional climaxes. It is, indeed, far superior to most operatic librettos, even of the modern sort, in which librettists have come to realize that there must be some strength and fibre, some dramatic consistency.

"L'Attaque du Moulin" is written to a libretto made by Louis Gallet, after a tale of Emile Zola's, contributed to a collection by several French writers, published under the title of "Les Soirées de Médan." It is written in prose, as are all the librettos that Bruneau has used, for it is one of his artistic principles that operatic librettos should be in prose.

It is a little difficult from the first hearing of the first work of Bruneau's to be given in America to comprehend the excited discussion it has aroused. "L'Attaque du Moulin" was first produced in Paris in 1893, when Paris was already pretty well along on the modern road. The fearful discords, the "Wagnerian" noise, the realistic ugliness of this music are by no means characteristics that project themselves upon the listener's senses to-day. Nor can we see the surpassing beauty, originality, and melodic flow that Bruneau's admirers glorify in it. It gives the impression of the work of a composer who is steering, or is compelled by the quality of his talent to take, a middle course. In truth, the music does not often rise to any great height of eloquence, of emotional power, or of graphic and picturesque vividness, such as the warlike subject would have prompted.

The first act is agreeable, the music suggesting, if not enforcing, the pastoral nature of the village festival, the lover's happiness, the goodness of Marcelline. It is introduced by a prelude that is not unsuccessful in conjuring up this mood in advance. Marcelline's long air in this act has few salient musical qualities, though its dramatic possibilities give an admirable opportunity which Mme. Delna makes the most of.

In the second act there is war and the loud music that accompanies it; emphatic declamation that is little more than vocal interjection, though there is a fine speech by Marcelline and a love song for Dominique, verging into a duet between him and Françoise that has more musical charm than is often liberated in the course of the opera. There is a sonorous chorus at the close of the third act which the German soldiers sing over the dead body of their comrade, the sentinel whom Dominique has slain in his escape. In the last act the composer has reached his highest level. Here are some of the most dramatic moments of the opera, culminating in the return of the French troops, which is in effect the true climax of the whole work.

There are also some of the most tender and sincerely felt passages in which the old miller, Merlier, doomed to be shot by the French in the place of the escaped Fleming, speaks with noble dignity and self-sacrificing tenderness to his daughter. But here, as elsewhere in "L'Attaque du Moulin," the feeling is never quite absent that the drama is higher and more powerful, more imaginative, than the music that should heighten and intensify its effect.

The opera is given with an altogether unusual excellence, under Mr. Tango's direction. The cast contains two singers who took part in the first production in Paris at the Opéra Comique, Mme. Delna and Mr. Clément. Mme. Delna has her original part of Marcelline, which she makes a sharply individualized and characteristic figure, a personage of flesh and blood. It is finely drawn and admirably composed, and Mme. Delna's noble and beautiful voice and her excellent singing lift the part to one of much significance. Another beautifully executed performance is that of Mr. Gilly as Merlier.

This artist has revealed a finer and finer artistic fibre as he has had the opportunity in successive rôles; and in this he shows his quality not only as a fine singer—one whose enunciation is of the most beautiful clearness and purity, and whose voice, admirable in itself, is used with artistic skill—but also as an actor of remarkable capacity. His impersonation of the miller was sympathetic; it was marked by geniality and bonhomie, and by a true dignity and gentle tenderness at the hour of his approaching sacrifice.

Mr. Clément, who has now the part of the hero, Dominique, is another singer who makes all there is to be made out of what librettist and composer have intrusted to him. He has seldom sung with more beauty, more manliness, and power in style; and as they who have heard him this Winter very well know, his vocal art is most finished. Mr. De Segurola was successful in presenting a strikingly plausible figure of a German officer in hostile French surroundings, skillfully differentiated in its type from that of the French soldiers. But Mr. Segurola has sung better than he did upon this occasion. Mme. Noria as Françoise, and in these surroundings, on the other hand, sang better than she has before, and made something more dramatically of the part of the fiancée.

Book Rights for "Chantecler" Here.

Duffield & Co. have closed preliminary arrangements with Edmond Rostand for the early American publication in book form of his much-talked-of play "Chantecler." The translator has not yet been decided upon by M. Rostand, but the choice is likely to be a young American poetess whose previous work in this field has been noteworthy.

HOWLAND'S 'SARRONA' HEARD.

Opera by American Composer Has Many Reminiscences.

Sarrona.....Luisa Villani
Accaro.....Nunzio Bari
Filene.....Ester Ferrabini
Lo Schiavo.....Giuseppe Pimazzoni
The prologue sung by Jeanne de Courcey.
Conductor, Egido Jacchia.

Mr. Legrand Howland presented for the first time in America at the New Amsterdam Theatre yesterday afternoon his opera of "Sarrona." It was a special matinée, and a good deal of preparation and study must have been undertaken to put the work on the stage for so brief a view. The results were rather better than might have been expected. The singers made a sincere effort. Mr. Pimazzoni showed a very good voice and credit is due to Mr. Jacchia for his work with the orchestra.

"Sarrona," so far as the scene, the action, and the characters are concerned, is an East Indian opera. It is in one act with a prologue, and carries out a bewildering and complicated set of motives that are not at all explained by what happens or seems to happen on the stage. There are a dissolute King and his dancing woman, a people in revolt, a Queen who desires to save the State for her son, a faithful, and, as it turns out, amorous slave. She yields the city to the insurgents and begs her worthless spouse to kill himself, tries to do it herself, is forestalled by the faithful slave, who, having dispatched her husband, thereupon avows his love for her.

"The conflict of emotions here," says the official synopsis of the plot, "is strenuous. Given the harsh dictation of the caste, the situation is as wrong as situation can be." It is, operatically speaking, worse than wrong; for the listeners it is unintelligible. Nor is it cleared up by the slave's sudden suicide and the Queen's reflection that in the Buddhistic heaven he may be her true King. On her discovery that she is left utterly alone in ruin, the curtain descends, as the argument explains, and adds "the supreme aspect of tragedy truly so called is revealed."

Though the opera is East Indian and Legrand Howland an American, the music is Italian, and very much so. Mr. Howland is understood to have lived a number of years in Italy. He cannot be blamed in the least for not having had there "the dull ear of a drowsy man." He has heard strains of many Italian composers; of the younger and the elder Verdi, from "Ernani" to "Aida"; of Ponchielli; of Puccini, and even of Leoncavallo; and these strains have made their way copiously into the music of "Sarrona." Mr. Howland shows some technical facility in his music, especially in writing for the voice; but his orchestration, while it strives for rich and luscious color, is not that of a skilled worker in this medium. The opera, as a whole, in the construction of the libretto and the character and quality of its music, is the product of dilettante ambition supported in an uncertain and insufficient manner by technical dexterity and skill, which can be learned, and by still less originality and talent, which cannot be.

Mr. Howland is to be commended for his high aims, for his industry and pertinacity, and for what other persuasive means he commands, in having this opera presented, as his programme announces, "nearly 200 times in twenty-two of the Government and principal opera houses of Italy and Austria." New York is now added to the list. In a brief speech that he made at the close, thanking his audience for their courtesy, and the proprietors of the theatre for theirs, he said it had taken him ten years to reach his native country with "Sarrona," and that if there was a demand for operas from American composers he was sure it would be met.

After the opera there was a series of classic dances by Gertrude Van Axten, Irene Sandon, and Orchidée.

MISS HAVEMEYER BRIDE OF J. W. WEBB

St. Bartholomew's Crowded at Nuptials of Younger Daughter of Late H. O. Havemeyer.

HANDSOME BRIDAL GIFTS

Bracelet of Large Emeralds and Diamonds from the Bridegroom, Eldest Son of Dr. W. Seward Webb.

The marriage at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Bartholomew's Church, at Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, of James Watson Webb, eldest son of Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb, and Miss Electra Havemeyer, younger daughter of the late Henry O. Havemeyer, filled that edifice with a fashionable crowd. A number of policemen had been detailed to keep the crowd from gathering about the church and they found plenty to do.

The church was simply decorated. Clusters of Ascension lilies were fastened to alternate pews on the nave, but the chancel itself was elaborately decorated and practically screened from the body of the church with a hedge of white roses, lilies and Spring flowers, and at each side of the steps leading to the altar tall flowering pink almond trees were placed, so that a gate effect was given. The back of the chancel was banked with white flowers and palms.

A special musical programme arranged by the organist, Arthur S. Hyde, was rendered by the full vested choir. While the guests were being seated the choir and organist rendered "O, for the Wings of a Dove," by Mendelssohn; Gounod's "Sanctus," Henschel's "Morning Hymn," and the Vorspiel and Chorale from the Meistersinger. As the bridal party moved up the aisle a Wagnerian wedding march was played. Other selections included "O, Perfect Love" and Doane's "Ancient of Days," with the Mendelssohn Wedding March as the bridal party left the chancel.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Heber Newton and the Rev. Endicott Peabody of Groton, Mass.

The bridal cortege was led by the ushers, Vanderbilt Webb, a brother of the bridegroom; George Whitney, Joseph W. Burden, Robert L. Bacon, Ernest E. Tracy, Howard Roome, Gordon Abbott, James J. Higginson, Jr., Walbridge Taft, Hamilton Hadden, and Whitney Kernochan, followed by the bridesmaids, the Misses Katherine Atterbury, Margaret Dix, Anita L. Peabody, Ethel Cowdin, and Miss Louise Jackson. The matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Frelinghuysen, wore a white satin gown made like those of the bridesmaids, and her hat and muff were like theirs.

The bride, who walked to the altar with her brother, Horace Havemeyer, who gave her in marriage, wore a white satin princess gown with a long court train. The upper part of the robe was draped with point lace, and the elbow sleeves were also of exquisite point. A spray of orange blossoms was fastened on the corsage at the bottom of the V-shaped opening.

The bride's stepmother, Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer, wore a deep violet-colored moire robe topped by a high hat draped with purple tulle. She also wore a long string of wonderful pearls.

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. W. Seward Webb, wore a gold-colored satin with an overdress of black lace with touches of gold and a high turban with black tulle and gold net, with a yellow bird of paradise plume at the side.

The church ceremony was followed by a reception for the relatives and intimate friends only at the Havemeyer residence, 1 East Sixty-sixth Street.

The bridal gifts were handsome, and there were no end of them, but only intimate friends and relatives saw them. They included a string of wonderful pearls from the bride's stepmother, Mrs. Havemeyer; a diamond tiara from Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and a bracelet set with large emeralds and diamonds from the bridegroom. Mrs. Frelinghuysen gave her sister a quantity of silver, as did also Mrs. Twombly, Mrs. Eliott F. Shepard, and Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb, after spending their honeymoon in Europe, will make their home in Chicago for the present, as Mr. Webb is stationed there in connection with his railroad work.

HOCKEY CLUB TEAM DEFEATS ST. NICKS

Scores First Victory of the Season in Poorly Played Match by Score of 4 to 2.

"BILLY" RUSSELL INJURED

The Hockey Club of New York, playing against the St. Nicholas combination last night at St. Nicholas Rink, scored its first victory in the Amateur League championship series, the final score being 4 goals to 2. Weakened by the loss of three of their best players, the St. Nicholas seven was unable to repel the attack on its goal by the Hockey Club men. It was not real hockey which was played, but a high-class article of ice shinny. However, there was much interest in the play on the part of those gathered in the rink. It was a scrimmage from start to finish, with team play thrown to the winds by both combinations, and as a result there was probably more excitement than if the real Canadian game had been offered.

Another accident occurred last night, which was almost the duplicate of that which happened to Garon recently. "Billy" Russell, known as the "old warhorse" of the game in this city, in defending against a shot by Frazer-Campbell was struck on the bridge of the nose by the puck, and the force of the blow cut a deep gash. This occurred in the second half, and Russell retired from the game, his place being taken by Tisne. It required four stitches to close the wound.

The play in the first period was somewhat less interesting than in the second half. For almost the entire first half the puck was kept continually in St. Nicholas territory. At the close of this session the Hockey Club had the better of the argument by 3 goals to 0. In the second half the St. Nicholas team, with Russell off the ice, was able to get closer to the Hockey Club goal, and two tallies were sent in the cage, as against one score by the Hockey Club. The line-up:

St. Nicholas	Position.	Hockey Club.
Hayward	Goal	Regensberger
Richards	Point	Russell, Tisne
B. Leake	Cover point	Davidson
Cornell	Centre	Mackenzie
Gordon	Rover	Britton
Winter	Left wing	Bryan

Goals—First Half—First for the Hockey Club by Britton in 0:20; second for the Hockey Club by Bryan in 5:10; third for the Hockey Club by Brush in 14:43. Second Half—First for St. Nicholas by Frazer-Campbell in 4:39; second for the Hockey Club by Bryan in 14:25; third for St. Nicholas by Frazer-Campbell in 15:34. Penalties—Britton, 1 minute; Gordon, 2 minutes. Referee—E. Dufresne, Wanderers. Assistant referee—E. Garon, Wanderers. Goal umpires—R. Strange, N. Y. A. C., and A. Gunther St. Nicholas. WATERWAY LEAGUE ELECTION.

200 Members Attend First Annual Meeting of the Organization.

The first annual meeting of the Waterway League of Greater New York and Long Island was held last night at the Johnston Building. Some 200 individual members and representatives of yacht clubs attended the meeting, which was presided over by Major Edward R. Gilman, U. S. A., retired. It was stated that Major Gilman had been invited to accept the nomination of Vice President of the National Power Boat Association, and the following communication from that body, addressed to the league, was read:

The National Power Boat Commission, composed of the Executive Committees of the National Power Boat Association and other allied organizations, met in Detroit last month and drafted a substitute measure for the Humphrey bill, which, it is believed, will safeguard the interests of power boat owners, and at the same time make the operation of boats less dangerous. The bill will be urged upon Congress in place of the Humphrey bill, and we have every reason to believe it will meet with success.

The Commodores of yacht clubs affiliated with the league who acted as a Nominating Committee submitted the following candidates, who were unanimously elected:

President—Major Edward R. Gilman, U. S. A., retired, Atlantic Yacht Club; First Vice President—Commodore Joseph B. Acker, Canarsie Yacht Club; Second Vice President—Capt. Herman A. Metz, N. G. N. Y., Larchmont Yacht Club; Third Vice President—Commodore Joseph W. Masters, Belle Harbor Yacht Club; Chairman of the Board of Governors—Commodore George J. Vestner, Colonial Yacht Club; Secretary and Treasurer—Fred A. Reid, Atlantic Yacht Club; Assistant Secretary and Treasurer—George W. Masters, Belle Harbor Yacht Club; Recording Secretaries—Robert C. Kerr, Jr., Macon Athletic Club; James Wallace, Jr., Butler C. Pfeiffer, C. M. Strong, and George N. Sprague.

Lasker and Schlechter Draw Again.

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—Dr. E. Lasker, chess champion, and Carl Schlechter of Vienna, challenger, concluded the ninth game of their match for the world's championship in this city to-day. Schlechter had the opening, and played throughout all the sessions required for the game with such care and precision that all efforts on the part of the champion to catch him unawares were of no avail. Eventually another draw, the eighth so far, was recorded. Schlechter has won one game, Dr. Lasker none.

YALE VANQUISHED IN BASKET BALL

Columbia Takes Measure of New Haven Collegians by Score of 29 to 21.

2,500 CHEER THE PLAYERS

Freshmen Play So Roughly in Preliminary Game That It Came Near Being Stopped.

Yale held Columbia to an unexpectedly low score in a basket ball game in the Morningside gymnasium last night, though the Blue was finally defeated by the score of 29 to 21. More than 2,500 people crowded every available corner of the space allotted to the spectators and cheered enthusiastically the spectacular plays made on either side.

The feature of the game was the accurate long-distance shots made by the local players. No position or angle, however unfavorable to cage the ball, seemed to be too difficult, and the Columbia team as a whole proved their unequaled skill in shooting.

In a preliminary game between the freshmen of the same colleges, the Yale youngsters defeated their opponents by the score of 12 to 9. So roughly and hard did the cubs fight that Prof. Lord, Chairman of the University Committee on Athletics, threatened to stop the playing. After conferring with the referee, however, the game was allowed to proceed. The line-up:

Columbia.	Positions.	Yale.
29.		21.
Kiendl	Left forward	Goodwin
Mahon	Right forward	Drew
Alexander	Centre	Finnessy
Lee	Left guard	Murfey

Substitutes—Spencer for Alexander, Mendelsohn for Benson, Osterhout for Mendelsohn, Carson for Lee, C. Murphy for S. Murfey, Hyde for Drew. Referee—Tom Thorpe, Columbia. Umpire—Lieut. J. W. This Advertisement is Published for the Protection of Automobile Buyers

United States Patent No. 549,160, granted November 5th, 1895, has been held by Judge Hough, of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, to be valid and to cover the modern gasoline automobile.

This Patent is Known to the Public as the "Selden Patent"

Licenses have been granted under this patent to manufacturers and importers of seventy-two makes of gasoline automobiles, the names of which are given below.

Suits may be brought under this patent for infringements by manufacturers, by dealers, or by users of pleasure or commercial gasoline automobiles, and it is the intention of the owners of this patent to protect the exclusive rights secured by it to those who have become licensees, by commencing suits against infringers of it.

The Selden Patent is a basic patent. It is recognized by nearly all reputable automobile manufacturers, and its basic character as well as its validity has been established by the Court, and therefore the manufacture, sale or use of any pleasure or commercial gasoline automobile by any person not licensed under this patent is unlawful and an infringement of this patent.

It is clearly the duty of every law-abiding American citizen to respect the exclusive rights secured by the patent, as it is a duty to respect any other valid patent, and to co-operate in upholding it, as it secures to the owners and licensees under it exclusive rights authorized by the Constitution of the United States and by law.

The Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers stands for much more than merely the recognition of the Selden Patent. Its members individually and through their combined efforts in the Association are chiefly responsible for the development of the automobile to its present perfected state.

There is no reason why anyone who is buying a car should not buy a car licensed under the Selden Patent. The licensees build cars of all classes and for all prices, so that there is scope among licensed cars for the satisfaction of every taste and every purse.

It has been the steadily maintained policy of those who own and control the Selden Patent not to extend the protection of it to any manufacturer who does not give the public good value for the money asked, and protection would be withdrawn from any manufacturer who wilfully marketed a dishonest car. It has not been the policy to extend protection under the Selden Patent to new and untried or doubtful products.

The licensees under the Selden Patent have been and are now leaders in the production of medium, low and high-priced cars. They have produced year by year better cars for the same money, and often better cars for less money, than have been produced by manufacturers who are not licensees. They compete with each other in quality and price exactly as they do with those who have no license.

Purchasers should not take any chances by buying unlicensed cars. By purchasing licensed cars they are protected by the Selden Patent and avoid the risk of litigation for infringement of that patent.

THIS ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE SO THAT BUYERS OF AUTOMOBILES MAY KNOW THE FACTS AND BE GOVERNED ACCORDINGLY

NEW YORK RACING SEASON OF 184 DAYS

Track Managers Finally Agree Upon Schedule, Which Is Approved.

AQUEDUCT OPENS APRIL 15

Full-Time Limit Allowed by Law to be Employed by Turfmen—Season Closes November 15.

New York Racing Dates for 1910.

Aqueduct—Friday, April 15, to Thursday, April 28, twelve days.
Jamaica—Friday, April 29, to Thursday, May 12, twelve days.
Belmont Park—Friday, May 13, to Monday, May 30, fifteen days.
Gravesend—Tuesday, May 13, to Thursday, June 16, fifteen days.
Sheepshead Bay—Friday, June 17, to Monday, July 4, fifteen days.
Brighton Beach—Tuesday, July 5, to Wednesday, July 20, fourteen days.
Yonkers—Thursday, July 21, to Wednesday, Aug. 3, twelve days.
Saratoga—Thursday, Aug. 4, to Saturday, Aug. 27, twenty-one days.
Sheepshead Bay—Monday, Aug. 29, to Saturday, Sept. 10, twelve days.
Gravesend—Monday, Sept. 12, to Saturday, Sept. 24, twelve days.
Belmont Park—Monday, Sept. 26, to Saturday, Oct. 8, twelve days.
Jamaica—Monday, Oct. 10, to Thursday, Oct. 27, sixteen days.
Aqueduct—Friday, Oct. 28, to Tuesday, Nov. 15, sixteen days.

For the first time since the season of 1907 The Jockey Club has provided for continuous racing in the State of New York from April 15 until Nov. 15, the legal time in which horses may be raced in the State. After many conferences an agreement was reached by the track managers yesterday, and following the agreement of the representatives the stewards of The Jockey Club ratified the schedule decided upon. It provides for 184 days of racing and is so arranged that there will be no conflicting dates between any of the tracks.

The adoption of the schedule was only made possible for the reason that both William A. Engeman, representing Brighton Beach, and James Butler, representing Empire City, did not press their demands for longer racing time. It was feared that these two tracks would seriously interfere with the plans of the Saratoga Racing Association, and only a few days ago it seemed inevitable that there would be some conflict of racing here.

By the arrangement of the racing days the Saturdays are nicely distributed, and after the meeting all of the track managers expressed themselves as being well pleased with the schedule. Saratoga had made a fight for a closing on Saturday and it won that point, while a meeting of 21 days' duration was all that was required, though there were 24 days of racing at the Springs last season.

The track representatives present when the schedule was finally adopted were August Belmont, the Westchester Racing Association; Schuyler L. Parson and Francis R. Hitchcock, the Coney Island Jockey Club; Philip J. Dwyer, the Brooklyn Jockey Club and the Queens County Jockey Club; W. H. Reynolds and W. C. Edwards, the Metropolitan Jockey Club; Andrew Miller, the Saratoga Racing Association; James Butler, the Empire City Racing Association, and W. A. Engeman the Brighton Beach Racing Association.

For a time it was thought that no dates would be had in the Spring that would conflict with the racing of the Maryland Jockey Club at Pimlico, but as a matter of fact the schedule provides that racing will begin in New York before the Maryland meeting. The dates selected for the Pimlico Spring meeting are from April 20 until May 7. In the Fall the Maryland Jockey Club, it is said, has agreed to hold its meeting after the conclusion of racing in New York.

HOPPLES MAY HAVE TO GO.

Light Harness Racing Men Aim to Abolish Practice Dangerous to Horses.

After two days' secret conference the Rules Committee of the National Trotting Association adjourned last night, still undecided about many of the recommendations for changes in rules which will be made to the National Trotting Congress to-day. That the different members of the committee cannot agree on some of the proposed changes is evident from the fact that a special session of the committee will be held at 10 o'clock this morning, at which an attempt will be made to adjust the many differences concerning new rules. It is several years since so many changes were proposed, and many of the conservative members of the committee are backward about recommending too many innovations in the government of light harness racing.

One of the points of contention is the plan to abolish hopples on pacers. Many of the Grand Circuit drivers are in favor of this, and certain members of the committee are making a strong effort to have the National Congress abolish this practice. One of the turfmen at the Murray Hill Hotel yesterday pointed out that about 90 per cent. of the accidents in harness racing were due to hopples worn by pacers. The track owners oppose the abolition of the hopples, because it would tend to reduce the number of entries in races open to pacers, and the horses would not make such fast time despite the fact that many good pacers never wear hopples. Those who favor the elimination of hopples claim that it is unfair to the pacers to without hopples to allow other horses to wear them.

Holmdel Farm Sold for $50,250.

Holmdel, the famous thoroughbred breeding farm at Red Bank, N. J., established by David Gideon and John Daly was sold at public auction yesterday for $50,250 to Ernest W. Brown of 43 West 130th Street. Mr. Brown said after the sale that he made the purchase on a speculation, and intimated that he had no intention of continuing the famous stud as a breeding establishment. Though several horsemen were present at the sale there were only two bidders, and one successfully concealed his identity, while Mr. Brown, the purchaser is not known to the turf. Holmdel contains 241 acres, and the ground alone cost Gideon & Daly $60,000. The various buildings and the tracks constructed by James H. McCreery cost more than $50,000.

Kentucky Racing Dates Allotted.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 8.—The Kentucky State Racing Commission met late this afternoon and allotted for the three Kentucky tracks as follows: Lexington, April 30 to May 7; Louisville, May 10 to June 4; Latonia, June 6 to July 9. Charles F. Grainger of the commission said that the troubles of the Latonia track were over, but that hereafter betting at the track must be by the pari-mutuel system, as the day of bookmakers in Kentucky was over.

Scheidig Beats St. John at Billiards.

In the play-off of the triple tie in the amateur billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy in Brooklyn last night C. Scheidig (235) defeated W. St. John (260) by a score of 235 to 232. Scheidig's high run was 23 and his average 4 40-48. St. John had an average of 4 39-40 and a high run of 24. To-night St. John (260) will meet F. A. Boyd (215.)

Hueston Wins from Manahan.

Thomas Hueston, who is matched to play Fred Eames for the three-cushion billiard championship, played one game yesterday at Doyle's Academy, Broadway and Forty-second Street. He defeated J. Manahan by a score of 40 to 17, making a high run of 5.

Williams Wins in Amateur Billiards.

In the amateur handicap pool tournament in progress at the Broadway Billiard Academy, Sixty-fifth Street and Broadway, B. Williams, 80, defeated R. Vincent, 100, in one of the closest contests of the tournament by a score of 80 to 96. Williams's high run was 14 and Vincent's was 11.

Powers Denies Sheppard Offer.

Secretary James E. Sullivan of the Amateur Athletic Union has received a letter from P. T. Powers to the effect that in all fairness to Melvin W. Sheppard Mr. Powers wants it distinctly understood that he has not at any time made an offer to Sheppard to become a professional and run at Madison Square Garden or anywhere else.

KEEN ICE FOR CURLERS.

St. Andrew's and Caledonians to Play Off for Honors To-day.

Curlers had the most favorable conditions to play their match for the Utica Cup at the Van Cortlandt Park Lake yesterday. The ice was in splendid shape, and the atmosphere not too cold for the players, and as a result the performances were of a high order. The cup last year was won by the Dunwoodie Curling Club, but this time the trophy lies between two rinks of the Caledonian Club of New York, the play-off being scheduled for to-day.

Three rinks started off yesterday morning for the prize, and at the finish of the first round two Caledonian teams were pitted against St. Andrew's. This round resulted in the success of the Caledonians, who scored nineteen points to fourteen in each instance.

The four Archibald brothers of the Caledonian Club carried off the honors of the competition, beating the Terrace City of Yonkers in the first seventeen heads by a score of nineteen points to ten, and in the second round outplayed a strong rink of St. Andrew's by a score of nineteen to fourteen.

The opposing rinks of St. Andrew's No. 1 and Dunwoodie Curling Club had a nip and tuck encounter to the close, the Dunwoodies, victors of last year, being defeated by Skip Boyet's men by one point. The scores:

FIRST ROUND.

JACK JOHNSON ARRESTED.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 8.—Because one of Jack Johnson's prize bulldogs nearly chewed the arm off Sam Lewis, a resident of Detroit, to-day, Johnson was arrested and ordered to appear in the Recorder's court Wednesday morning and answer for the canine's misconduct. Johnson is charged with harboring a vicious dog, and he declares he will spend all he is worth to save the dog's life.

Johnson, being unable to secure rooms at a Detroit hotel, rented a private house on Madison Avenue for himself, wife, and two bulldogs. This noon he took his dogs out on Madison Avenue, and he had not gone far before a crowd of "hero worshippers" were following him. Lewis was among the crowd and happened to get too close to Johnson, and the dog jumped on him and set his teeth in his right arm. Johnson brought into play some of the muscle he is training for Jeffries, and after considerable trouble succeeded in releasing the dog's hold on Lewis's arm. Lewis lost no time in visiting a physician and having his wounds cauterized and dressed. He then went to the court and asked for the black pugilist's arrest. Johnson values the dogs highly, and if a case is made against him the dog may be ordered electrocuted.

Fight to be Held at San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 8.—The Jeffries-Johnson fight for the world's heavyweight championship on July 4, will be fought in or near San Francisco. Following a conference between "Tex" Rickard and Jack Gleason, the disputing promoters, this was the unofficial but authoritative information learned to-night. The fight in all probability will be held in Coffroth's Colma Arena or at San Mateo, near San Francisco, or in San Francisco proper.

The conference ended with Rickard gloomy and Gleason apparently well pleased. That Rickard has given up all hope, in the face of County Attorney Job P. Lyons's declaration last night that the fight cannot be held in this county, is undisputable, and Rickard is quoted as saying that the fight now undoubtedly will go to California.

Moran Beats Matty Baldwin.

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—The clever work and superior condition of Owen Moran of England won him a clean-cut decision over Matty Baldwin of Charlestown in twelve rounds at the Armory Athletic Association to-night. Baldwin was able to outpoint his opponent in but one round, the ninth, when Moran seemed to show up. The first and eighth rounds were fairly even, but the others, excepting the ninth, went to Moran. The Englishman used his left to good advantage in jabbing Baldwin in the face and hooks to the jaw.

Mike Glover Wins Bout at Brown's.

Mike Glover of Boston outpointed Charley Seiger of Hoboken in a ten-round bout at Brown's Athletic Association last night. Glover did the leading from the start, and in the second round had Seiger badly dazed with lefts to the jaw and right uppercuts. After that Seiger was on the defensive, and although he showed remarkable staying qualities he was decidedly bested by the Bostonian.

Cross-Country Awards Made.

At a meeting of the Metropolitan Association Cross Country Committee held at James E. Sullivan's office, 21 Warren Street, last night, the junior cross country championship was awarded to the Mohegan Athletic Club of West Farms, and will be run over their course on April 3. The senior cross country championship was awarded to the Passaic Valley Canoe Club of Passaic, N. J., and will be run over their course April 17.

Keating Equals World's Record.

ALBANY, Feb. 8.—At the athletic meet to-night of Company A of the Second Battalion, Tenth Regiment, National Guard, in the Albany Armory, N. F. Keating of the Irish-American Athletic Club of New York equaled the world's amateur record of 6 2-5 seconds in the sixty-yard dash. In the intercollegiate relay race of one mile the Dartmouth team defeated a team representing Hamilton; time, 3:44 3-5. Edward F. Carr of the Xavier Athletic Club of New York won the five-mile race; time, 24:26.

We now offer, to yield over 5%, first mortgage bonds which have met the real test, by surviving a receivership undisturbed. This should be enough, but the bonds are guaranteed principal and interest by a prominent trunk line and are a first lien at $13,500 a mile.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Active and Irregular—Call Money Rates, 2¼@2¾ Per Cent.

MANY SUPPORTING ORDERS

Their Diminution, However, Encourages Professional Selling at Close —Demand Sterling at Low Point.

Liquidation of weakly margined accounts at the opening of business, coupled with one of the now familiar bearish demonstrations, carried prices of a dozen conspicuous stocks to levels below those touched by them at any time on Monday. United States Steel sold down to 75, Union Pacific to 178½, St. Paul to 144, Amalgamated Copper to 70¼, and American Smelting to 75¼. Before this opening decline had run twenty minutes it became evident that there were present in the market for the first time in many days adequate supporting orders in the stocks which have become pivotal. This was particularly true of United States Steel and of Union Pacific, and as they advanced the entire market turned, indulging before midafternoon in the rather unusual treat of a real recovery. When it became apparent, however, that the movement of prices had thus been turned the supporting buying of Steel diminished and the stock, which had rallied to 76⅝, began once more to display symptoms of heaviness. This became so conspicuous in the final hour of trading that it encouraged bearish speculators, whose success has emboldened them, to experiment with the market along their usual lines, and so successful was the attempt that the final phase of the market was again one of unsettlement. Steel, Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, Smelting, and numerous other shares closed below their final quotations of Monday night. Transactions in Steel made up nearly a third of the day's business of above a million shares, while one of the most insistent reports on the floor of the Exchange had it that a block of the stock which had been pressing upon the market for some little time past had been entirely liquidated, or the remnant disposed of by private transactions. Technical considerations within the market itself are accorded this amount of space in this review simply for the reason that, in the prevailing state of mental disturbance in Wall Street, such considerations are very largely dictating the immediate course of prices. It should be added, however, that little by little a larger view is coming to be taken of the Washington situation by really important financial interests, and that this view will undoubtedly prevail more generally in due time. Better railroad earnings for the month of January, such as the gross returns of the Great Northern, which exceeded those of January, 1909, by $1,300,000, testify to the excellent volume of business still under way throughout the country, as do also the reported intentions of the Baltimore & Ohio to enter the market for 10,000 freight cars, the Southern Railway for at least 6,000 cars of a similar kind, and the Rock Island and other roads for both freight and passenger equipment. The State of Michigan, reporting on the condition of Winter wheat yesterday, noted that where half of the correspondents addressed reported damage during the month a year ago, out of 601 agents of whom inquiries were made this time only 79 found any trace of injury.

The only incident of the day in the money market was the weakness in foreign exchange in the early trading, when demand sterling sold down to 4.8500, the lowest level touched since November, 1908. This weakness is attributable to offerings of stock bills, although considerable confusion exists as to the attitude which European holders of American securities are adopting toward the present stock market.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.
Tuesday.

Business on the Consolidated Stock Exchange increased heavily late in the day. Early buyers "for a turn" threw over the stocks they had bought, while room operators, who had started to cover shorts in the early dealings, found that they could get stocks so easily that they changed front and again went short. Trading in United States Steel common was especially heavy, with numerous single blocks of 500 and 600 shares changing hands. This stock touched a low price of 74⅞, compared with a low of 75 on the New York Stock Exchange, with its final sale at 75, against a last price of 75¼ on the other board. Transactions in all issues aggregated 177,220 shares, divided among seventy-one different stocks.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Stocks Close Near Lowest.

About 800,000 shares of United States Steel were traded in out of total sales of about 1,000,000 shares. At 75 and slightly above that figure the bears encountered considerable opposition, but after having sold up to 76⅝ the price receded again below the worst price of Monday, and the close found the stock within ⅛ of the lowest, again showing a net loss for the day, although this amounted to only ¼, as against the much heavier losses of other recent days. In a few instances fair rallies from the low prices of the day were shown among the active stocks, but Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper, two of the stocks most heavily sold apart from Steel, showed at the close recoveries of only ⅛ from the lowest, Amalgamated after an extreme decline of 2 points and Union after an extreme decline of 1¾ points. Reading, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, and Great Northern were all up fractions at the close, having rallied more than the further declines they had suffered earlier in the day.

As to Advance Information.

Advance information regarding the text of Presidential messages and other similar documents which may have a bearing on the financial situation has so frequently been had in Wall Street that the notion prevails in some quarters that advance information is available to some people there about almost anything in which they happened to be sufficiently interested to make the effort to get such information. Probably on some such assumption as this was based a report yesterday that certain bankers had succeeded in arranging to get the text of the forthcoming decision of the Supreme Court in the Tobacco case in advance of its being handed down by that court. The impossibility of any such leak under the procedure followed by the members of the Supreme Court in handling important decisions is well recognized, even in Wall Street, but that any one should profess to be able to get such information helps to illustrate the effect produced upon some people's minds by the known fact that Presidential messages are often available in Wall Street before their transmission to Congress.

Light on Dear Meat.

Figures submitted to the stockholders of the Chicago Junction Railways and Union Stock Yards Company, at their annual meeting yesterday, would indicate that one good reason for the high price of meat, aside from storage plant conspiracies and other matters engaging the attention of public investigators, is the scarcity of live stock. President Thayer's report showed that the number of cars of live stock received in 1909 was the smallest in twenty-four years. The total of 252,712 was 25,908 less than in 1908. Net earnings were $2,148,494, a decrease of $41,429 as compared with the previous year. President Thayer is hopeful, however. He predicted that the prevailing high prices were likely to stimulate the production of meat-producing animals and bring prices down again. High corn over the last two or three years was the root of the evil, President Thayer thought, because at the price farmers preferred to sell their corn rather than fatten cattle and hogs.

Michigan Wheat Doing Well.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Trading Is Generally Depressed on the London Stock Exchange.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Money was easily obtainable and discount rates were weak to-day.

The various sections of the Stock Exchange had a generally depressed appearance. The political uncertainty caused bears to sell Consols, but a recovery occurred in the afternoon. The break in Americans depressed diamond and copper shares, which were offered from Paris, and closed only a fraction above the worst. Kaffirs were neglected, and rubber shares and home rails were about the only firm exceptions.

American securities, on which the carry-over rate was 4½ per cent., opened quiet and from unchanged to half a point lower. Trading was light, but the market improved until the early afternoon, when New York selling caused a decline of about a point. Renewed buying in the last hour helped a recovery, but the close was uncertain.

Money, 1½@1¾ per cent.
The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2½ per cent.; for three months' bills, 2⅝@2½ per cent.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Trading on the Bourse to-day was inactive with a heavy tone, following the weakness in New York yesterday.

Three per cent. rentes, 98f 87½c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 18c for checks.

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—Unfavorable New York advices caused a sharp decline in prices on the Boerse to-day.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Coppers More Active, Though Generally Weak After Day's Irregular Market.

LOSSES GENERALLY SMALL

Nevada, Miami, and Greene-Cananea Close Even with Opening Levels After Uneven Fluctuations.

Curb coppers were again weak yesterday, although some issues were not lower at the close than at the opening. Nevada Consolidated Copper, after opening at 20½, went up to 21½, but dropped back to the opening level, which was also the closing price, after transactions of 8,600 shares. Ray Central was unusually active, reporting transactions of 14,500 shares, the price ranging between 3 1-16 and 2⅝, the close being at 2⅞, ⅛ below the opening level. Ray Consolidated, after selling 7,900 shares between 20¾ and 18½, closed at 19, 1 point below the opening. Greene-Cananea and Miami both closed even with the opening prices after going higher. Butte Coalition rose from 23 to 23¼.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—Trading in the local market was fairly active to-day, but price changes were not large. Prices were generally lower during the early part of the session, but the copper shares showed some improvement. Lake Copper, North Lake, Hancock, North Butte, Copper Range, Butte Coalition, and Superior Copper were leaders in point of activity and advance. The undertone turned weaker toward the last half hour, however, and the market closed irregular.

BIG GRAIN HOUSE BANKRUPT.

The T. H. Bunch Company Now in the Hands of a Federal Court.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 8.—Judge Trieber in the Federal court here to-day declared the T. H. Bunch Company, one of the largest grain and elevator concerns in the Southwest, a bankrupt. H. K. Cochran, one of the receivers originally appointed by the Chancery Court, was named receiver.

This action renders the previous acts of the Chancery Court void and the company will be forced through the regular bankruptcy proceedings. More than $200,000 is involved.

SMELTERS DIVIDEND UP.

International Company Stock Placed on an 8 Per Cent. Basis.

The stock of the International Smelting and Refining Company, it was said after the Directors' meeting yesterday, has been placed on an 8 per cent. basis by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., as compared with 1½ per cent. quarterly dividend previously paid. The company, which has only $10,000,000 of its authorized $50,000,000 capital outstanding, was organized about a year ago by the Cole-Ryan United Metals interests to compete with the American Smelting and Refining Company. Its principal property at present is the lead-refining plant at Raritan, purchased from the United Metals Selling Company. A smelter now building in Utah will be in operation in the Spring.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat Strong and Active on Decreasing Stocks—Provisions Firm—Cotton Weak on Liquidation.

Wheat continued to show strength and advanced easily, with final prices only a little under the best. There was a little selling at the start on the lower cables and on the large increase in the European stock of wheat, but later the market readily advanced, and was active and strong on Bradstreet's decrease in the American visible of 1,664,000 bushels, making, with the Canadian visible, a decrease of 1,892,000 bushels, compared with the decrease of 2,685,000 bushels last year and an increase last week of 233,000 bushels. The offerings on the advance were not large, and there was a very firm market reported in cash wheat both West and Northwest. The receipts of wheat in the Northwest were large, but the interior total movement was somewhat less than last week, and it was asserted that the offerings from the country did not indicate a maintenance of the recent heavy interior receipts. Cash wheat was dull and firm. Quotations were: No. 2 red, Winter, 1.28@$1.30, elevator, domestic; No. 2 red, spot, $1.29, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.25⅝; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.25⅝; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.21⅝.

Corn was fairly active, with prices showing a steady tone early, later developing a good deal of strength, and advancing about 1c a bushel, with active covering of shorts on general buying in sympathy with the rise in wheat. There was a good deal of buying on the report of a bullish statement to be issued by a Western authority, although later such report was denied. The recent decline has created a considerable sized short interest, and these seemed to be covering. Bradstreet's visible increased 735,000 bushels, against 42,000 increase the previous week and 807,000 increase last year. Cash corn quotations were: No. 2 new, 72c, elevator, domestic; No. 2 export, 70½c, nominal; No. 3, 70c; No. 4, 67¼c, and steamer, 69½c.

Oats were also high. The early trade was steady, the market later showing a good advance in sympathy with corn and wheat. The statistics were somewhat more bullish, Bradstreet's showing an increase of only 113,000 bushels, and cash oats were firmly held. Receipts were not so heavy at the West. Cash quotations were: Natural white, 52@53c; white clipped, 53@55½c.

Provisions were fairly active and quite firm, showing a good advance for the day and a very steady close. The advance was partly due to the strength in the live hog market and small receipts, while there was rather liberal buying credited to packing interests, and some of the Western packers are quite bullish owing to the hog situation and the small stocks.

COTTON.

There was an active and rather irregular trade in cotton. Prices declined during the morning nearly ⅛c from the close of the previous day, rallied in the early afternoon, but there was considerable selling again later in the session. The early decline was due in large part to the disappointment at the foreign news. The Liverpool market failed to keep up its pace in the spot cotton transactions and spot cotton was equal to 14 American points lower in Liverpool. The disappointment of the cables was taken advantage of by bearish local interests and the market broke rapidly as a result of the selling pressure. Several round lots of cotton were put on the market and there was a very unsettled feeling at the weakness in Wall Street, and many stop orders were caught as prices declined. The afternoon rally was on a more confident report regarding the spot situation in the South and private dispatches that the South was not offering cotton and would not accept any concessions in price. While there have been a good many statements regarding the probable increase in area, a Southern authority which has been making an investigation states that, owing to the high prices for grain and the weevil damage during the past season, there will be a large area of grain this season, notwithstanding the price in cotton. The Southern spot markets were quiet. The actual receipts continue small and the small-weekly movement was only about the same as last week and about 50 per cent. less than last year. The prices quoted in the Southern spot markets were generally unchanged.

COFFEE.

Coffee was quiet most of the day, with prices barely steady, closing unchanged to 5 points net decline, with sales of 19,750 bags. The foreign markets were lower than expected, Havre closing at noon with prices unchanged to ¼f lower, while Hamburg at the close was ¼ pfennig lower. The visible supply of Brazilian coffee in and afloat for the United States now amounts to 3,790,084 bags, compared with 4,013,347 last year, but it is estimated that the invisible is larger owing to heavy purchases by the interior direct. Small roasters and some of the Eastern consuming trade are not believed to be carrying much coffee, and a prominent spot man estimates that by the end of the season stocks will be low both in the visible and invisible supplies. Spot coffee quiet and steady; Rio No. 7, 8 11-16@8¾c.

Subsidiary Company of Consolidated Gas Increases Membership of Board.

The Directorate of the New York Edison Company, practically all of whose stock is owned by the Consolidated Gas Company, increased its Directorate at yesterday's annual meeting from seven to eleven members. All four of the new members are members of the Directorate of the Consolidated Gas Company. They are George F. Baker, George B. Cortelyou, William Rockefeller, and John W. Sterling.

SUPRE

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Two Broadway Parcels Disposed Of—Cortlandt Street Corner Brings $250,000 at Auction—West 34th Street Office Building Reported Sold—Private Dwellings in Demand.

Broadway property was the feature of yesterday's realty market, when two plots valued at over a half million dollars were disposed of. Both parcels are ripe for improvement, especially the smallest of the two, located near Times Square and known as 1,628 and 1,630 Broadway, at the southeast corner of Fiftieth Street.

The plot, which is covered by two-story frame taxpayers, is 50.4 by 57, and was sold by Cornelius V. V. Powers, who held the realty at $250,000. The American Horse Exchange, recently leased by William K. Vanderbilt to the Shuberts, is directly opposite the plot, which has been purchased by an investor who already holds several corners on Broadway between Forty-second and Seventy-second Streets.

No plans for the disposition of the property have been decided upon as yet. The sale was negotiated by the McVickar-Gaillard Realty Company.

The second Broadway deal was further north, the property being located at the northeast corner of Seventy-fifth Street, and consisting of five two-story taxpayers, 2,140 to 2,146 Broadway.

The plot, which has a frontage of 83.2 feet on Broadway and 80.4 feet on Seventy-fifth Street, was sold by Theodore W. Myers, a former Controller of this city, to Max Marx and Adolph M. Bendheim, at a figure said to be about $300,000. The eight-story Astor Apartment occupies the opposite corner. G. Waldo Smith, Jr., and M. W. Halpin were the brokers.

$250,000 for Cortlandt Street Corner.

There was an unusually large attendance at the Vesey Street salesroom yesterday. Properties disposed of brought excellent prices, the feature of the sale being the spirited bidding for the northeast corner of Cortlandt and Greenwich Streets, offered by Joseph P. Day for the Bedford estate. It was sold to Clarence W. Eckhardt of Horace S. Ely & Co. for $250,000.

The bidding started at $100,000, and by a succession of $5,000 advances went rapidly to $200,000. From $200,000 Mr. Day carried the price up to $225,000 by bids of $1,000, and thereafter by bids of $200 until the figure reached $250,000.

The price is said to be considerably above what the Bedford heirs had expected. The property is assessed for taxation at $205,000. 13-15 West 34th St. Reported Sold.

Negotiations which have been under way for some time are said to be practically concluded for the sale to the Frank A. Seitz Realty and Construction Company of the property at 13 and 15 West Thirty-fourth Street by the Bonwit Realty Company. The consideration at stake involves about $1,100,000. The plot, 50 by 120.6, is occupied by an eight-story building, opposite Astor Court, and separated by 11 West Thirty-fourth Street from the McCreery store.

The easterly portion of the site, No. 13, was bought by Bonwit, Teller & Co. in 1905. No. 15 was later taken by them on a sub-lease and the two lots improved with the present structure. A number of complications arose from the fact that the building was on a site part fee and part leasehold, and it took some time to unravel the disagreements growing out of several complicated phases of the sub-lease.

The building at 11 West Thirty-fourth Street, adjoining on the east, the one referred to above, is to come up for sale in foreclosure to-day in a suit brought by the Keystone Construction Company against F. A. Harris and others.

TRIBUTE BY HUGHES TO FREE SYNAGOGUE

Governor Says the Democracy of the Organization Appeals to Him Strongly.

LESSONS FROM PROPHETS

No Statesman Can Afford to Neglect the Wisdom of Israel, He Says at Anniversary Dinner.

The members of the Free Synagogue, which started with a handful of Jewish free thinkers under the leadership of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, but has increased to an organization of more than 500 members, celebrated their third anniversary with a dinner at the Hotel Astor last night. The toastmaster was Henry Morgenthau, and the principal speakers were Gov. Charles E. Hughes, Nicholas Murray Butler, Jacob H. Schiff, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, and Rabbi Wise.

Gov. Hughes, who arrived late from the Peary celebration, wished godspeed to Dr. Wise on his coming trip to England, and paid his respects to the Free Synagogue and the "strong and imperial spirit of your leader."

"We need such men, who desire to be of benefit to their fellow-citizens," said the Governor. "Every public officer, if wise, reads the Hebrew prophets. What they say is applicable to our problems. They were fully aware of the dangers and splendor of the automobile. Listen: 'The chariots rage in the streets, they jostle one another in the broad way. They seem like torches; they run like lightning.' The question, of course, is what sort of bill ought to be passed. The prophets lay emphasis on righteousness as the foundation of the State. Israel stood for in the past, and must always stand for, righteous conduct enforced by fidelity to God.

"The longer I deal with public questions the more I am convinced that what we need is not legislation, but moral character. There is only one problem—that of educating our youth. Education has progressed, but I would teach our boys and girls more about actual civic life. Religious doctrines cannot be inculcated in our schools, but there must be somewhere where moral power is generated. I am not in favor of the Church or synagogue going into politics as such. We cannot carry matters of faith into the political arena. Men of faith who have been cultivated in places where the love of God and man has been inculcated must go into politics and fight valiantly. Here is the source of power.

"Few men realize the influence they exert. Never before were there so many moral power houses with distributing lines which don't cut off each other's current as we have in this country today. Religion is nothing save as expressed in men. The suggestion of freedom and democracy about your organization appeals to me. I like the sound of it. The Lord knows I have concerns enough without getting into controversies here. I have come to the conclusion that you are led by a man with one thought—to make the most of a strong life in this community. We are all one, the Jew and the Gentile. Best wishes for your continued prosperity and hold fast to the conception of right as typified by Israel in the past and as I hope by Israelite and Gentile in the future."

Jacob H. Schiff, in his speech, wished the organization prosperity, but sounded a note of warning. He said:

"If I, who adhere to more conservative religious principles than Dr. Wise and his associates in the Free Synagogue, am with you to-night, it is because I wish to give encouragement to every movement which will make it possible for any and all of our people to retain allegiance to our ancient faith, a faith that has given and continues to give the ideals to mankind, it still stands so greatly in need of. And may I add this: The margin between Liberalism and Anarchism becomes sometimes all too narrow. Even Liberalism can go too far, and may lead so near to the brink of the abyss that, unless care and prudence be exercised, many might lose their hold and be lost into it. This is the danger of every advance movement, and against this danger let me warn Dr. Wise and those associated with him in this movement. Aside from this, I willingly recognize the value and importance of the work you have in hand, and appreciate the self-sacrifice which, three years ago, induced Dr. Wise single-handed, to found the Free Synagogue and to enter upon its ministry."

FROHMAN SAILS TO-DAY.

To Look After London Interests—To Stage "The Climax" at Sea.

Charles Frohman will sail this morning on the Mauretania for London to look after his theatres and productions in the British capital. He will divide his time while abroad among the principal cities of Europe, but will make his home in London.

Mr. Frohman will begin his répertoire season at the Duke of York's Theatre on Feb. 21. The season will comprise productions of plays by Bernard Shaw, Granville Barker, John Galsworthy, Haddon Chambers, W. Somerset Maugham, and J. M. Barrie, and a posthumous play by the late George Meredith. The company at the Duke of York's will consist of fifty players, whom it has taken an entire year to select. During the week of Feb. 21 Mr. Frohman will bring out Maugham's new play, "The Tenth Man," at the Globe Theatre, in connection with Arthur Bouchier, and will also present Marie Doro in "The Climax."

Besides the London production of English and French plays Mr. Frohman will also present a number of well-known American plays, including "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "The Honor of the Family," "The Bachelor's Baby," and "A Woman's Way." He will also make the first London production of "Inconstant George." During his stay abroad he intends to give special attention to making a series of productions in Paris, Berlin, and Vienna, and also to obtaining plays for his various stars, who at the beginning of next season will number twenty-six.

On the way over Mr. Frohman will direct the mid-ocean production of "The Climax" that is to be given on board of the Mauretania on Feb. 11 with the cast and scenery of the London production.

Last night, as a sort of farewell, Mr. Frohman said:

"I am more than pleased with the theatrical season in America this year. It has been great fun. I have had so many successes that I have forgotten my failures. I have but one regret at leaving just now, and that is that I shall be absent from the first performance of Hattie Williams in a farce the title of which I have definitely decided shall be 'The Girl He Couldn't Leave Behind.'"

ENGLISH MASTERS ON VIEW.

Morland's "The Shepherds" and Crome's "Old Mill" in Ehrich Exhibition.

At the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries is a collection of paintings that are to be sold Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week. Among various painters of more or less commonplace gifts are a few which will claim the attention of the more exacting public. J. S. H. Kever, for example, is represented by a beautiful little picture, a couple of children in a wheatfield, the figures drawn with the painter's characteristic simplicity and vigor, and the robin's-egg blue of the sky making a charming harmony with the blonde tone of the fields. A Van Marcke, also, rich in color and unusual in composition, is worthy of special notice, and there are some Thaulows that invite attention. The name of Elihu Vedder is attached to a boldly decorative little composition, the execution in which, however, lacks the decision and clarity of touch of the artist's representative canvases.

At the Ehrich Galleries is an exhibition of early English masters, in which are many dignified examples and many highly regarded names. Sir William Beechey is represented by a full-length portrait that is supposed to be of Sir Walter Scott, and is a credible likeness if we may judge from various engraved effigies of the great story teller. He is seen in a casual and friendly mood, seated on a bench built around a great tree, in earnest conversation with a dog whose back is toward us. It is a fine human portrait, full of appreciation of character.

Another picture that is agreeable for its union of pictorial quality with the sentiment of humanity is Morland's "The Shepherds." The circle of sheep in the foreground of the landscape and the familiar burly Englishman with his red-caped lady, are known to every connoisseur in colored prints, but the charming tone of the distant village set in its rich verdure is not so common in Morland's work.

John Crome's "Old Mill," with its cattle silhouetted against a brilliant sky, is more ambitious and less pleasing, although the sky is fine in tone. The "Hornby Castle," given to Gainsborough, is a beautiful landscape, with a general dignity of composition that includes many a realistic note, for example, the cow at the right of the foreground, with head just lifted from the stream at which it had been drinking, the water trickling in silvery drops from its big lips.

Reynolds is represented by three portraits, one of them, "White, the Paviour"; Sir Thomas Lawrence by a "Portrait of a Lady" in true "keepsake" style, with brown ringlets and inane expression; Francis Cotes by a much stronger and more attractive portrait of "Lady Charlotte Johnson," Romney by an entrancingly pretty but insipid "Milady," and Henry Wyatt by a superb portrait far ahead in color and characterization of many that are catalogued under greater names than his.

The painting of the textures alone in Wyatt's portrait, the rich velvet overlaid by a subtle bloom, the flimsy lace ruff, the white feather in the dappled fur, quite apart from the gravity and depth of the color, are achievements of a true painter under whose brush pigment, like a clever actor, portrays a variety of characters without losing its individuality. The face, too, is one to excite interest, serious and refined, with a certain sensitive beauty of modeling if not of features.

FROHMAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY

To Old Indictment Charging Partnership in Alleged Theatrical Trust.

Charles Frohman, theatrical manager, pleaded not guilty to an old indictment before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions yesterday and was released in $1,000 bail. This was furnished by his brother, Daniel Frohman, who gave as security his house at 159 West Seventy-ninth Street.

It was on Jan. 31, 1907, that Frohman, together with Marc Klaw, Abraham Erlanger, J. Fred Zimmerman, Al Hayman, and Samuel F. Nixon was indicted for an alleged conspiracy among the theatrical interests of this country. The indictments against Klaw & Erlanger were dismissed six months later but the rest have hung fire ever since.

Gus Edwards Company Bankrupt.

Separate petitions in bankruptcy were filed yesterday against Gus Edwards, composer of popular songs and theatrical producer; the Gus Edwards Music Publishing Company, publisher of popular sheet music, and his wife, Lillian A. Edwards, manager of vaudeville acts, all of 1,531 Broadway, by Stern, Singer & Barr, attorneys for various creditors, and Judge Holt appointed Theron G. Strong receiver for the Gus Edwards Music Publishing Company with a bond of $1,000, as it was stated that the assets consist of 150,000 copies of music worth $1,500, fixtures $500, and pianos, amount not given. The petitioning creditors of Gus Edwards are Augustin J. Powers $300 loan, White Studio $250 photos, and Henry Rapp $50 money advanced. In all three cases it was alleged that they are insolvent, and on Feb. 7 admitted in writing inability to pay their debts.

Theatrical Men Swear Off Taxes.

Five theatrical managers swore off their personal taxes yesterday. They were A. W. Dingwall of Litt & Dingwall, $1,500; Jacob W. Mayer, manager of the Liberty Theatre, $1,500; Frank McKee of the Savoy, $1,500; Daniel Frohman, $20,000, and Joe Weber, $15,000. James J. Corbett also swore off an assessment of $10,000.

Death Threats for Gresser.

"Black Hand" letters threatening assassination, which have been received by Borough President Lawrence Gresser of Queens recently, are thought to be the work of a practical joker or a crank. One letter threatened death to Mr. Gresser if the men who have been laid off in the departments of that borough since the opening of the year were not immediately put back to work.

OPEN AIR SHOWS FOR POLO GROUNDS

President Brush Plans to Use Ball Field as a Hippodrome When the Giants Are Away.

MOVABLE STAGE BUILDING

President John T. Brush of the New York National Baseball Club announced yesterday that beginning about May 30 the Polo Grounds would be transformed into a large Summer amusement amphitheatre. In the baseball season there are about seventy-seven days when the Giants play at home, and heretofore the grounds have been idle on all other dates. Mr. Brush said yesterday that he has had this plan in mind for years, but had never seen his way clear to launch it until this season. On the days when the Giants are not playing in the city, Mr. Brush plans to offer a varied programme of vaudeville, hippodrome performances, and concerts.

Arrangements for lighting the Polo Grounds at night are already under way, and this work is expected to take a couple of months. Only night entertainments will be offered at first, and later it is probable that entertainments will be given in the afternoon. Estimates are now being prepared on a device to cover and protect the baseball diamond. A portable stage will be erected, which may be put into place in an hour. This stage will have all the equipment of a regular theatre, including the footlights, scenery, drop curtain, and other accessories. It will be so constructed that it will bear any weight and will be substantial enough to permit a herd of elephants to perform on it. Two large electric signs are to be displayed at the new amusement park, one facing south at the top of the fence, at the old Manhattan Field. The other will face the Harlem River, and will be easily seen from the Bronx.

Mr. Brush, talking about his new plan, said:

"I believe that open-air amusements in the hot Summer nights will appeal to pleasure seekers who are unable to get out of the city to the shore resorts in the hot months. The Polo Grounds can be reached on trains for a five-cent fare, and it is a terminus for both the Sixth Avenue and Ninth Avenue Elevated lines. There will be a weekly change of programme, and many novelties will be offered from time to time. On account of the enormous seating capacity of the Polo Grounds, which, when the improvements are completed, will accommodate 40,000 persons, it will be possible for us to present the best things in the way of entertainment at a price within reach of all. A feature which will enable the residents of the lower east side to reach the grounds is the construction of the new runway, just completed, from the grand stand up to the Speedway, which makes the grounds easily accessible from the Subway, only a few blocks away."

WOMAN OUT TO OBLIGE BOSS.

Aged Newsdealer Makes Room for a Follower of Frank K. Bowers.

Commuters alighting from the Central and New Haven trains at the 125th Street station, at Park Avenue, and residents of the neighborhood accustomed to buy their morning papers from Mrs. Anna Kapelewitz, who, though 60 years old, has had a newsstand beneath the station for the last ten years, found a man in charge of the stand yesterday morning. Mrs. Kapelewitz was near by, but she was holding a big bundle of papers beneath her arm and tears were running down her cheeks as she ran hither and thither, trying to serve her old customers, who stopped in surprise in front of the stand that had been hers.

To those who asked her why she was no longer in charge of the stand, the old woman told how she had been dispossessed and her place given to Jake Winterfield, a henchman of Frank K. Bowers, Republican leader of the Thirtieth Assembly District in the Twelfth Election District, where Winterfield was Bowers's Captain. At Bowers's request the license for the stand, which is in the Thirty-first Assembly District, was given to Winterfield by Alderman Percy L. Davis of the Thirty-first.

Last night Bowers declared that Mrs. Kapelewitz was not as poor as she pretended to be, and he asserted at the same time that Winterfield, with a wife and three children, was really in dire need of the place. That his district Captain was more in need of work than the sixty-year-old woman who supported a family was the only reason Bowers advanced for having brought about her retirement.

Alderman Davis said last night that the Kapelewitz family paid $35 a month rent for their flat and that they owned property in Harlem and were fairly well to do instead of being poverty-stricken.

Tree-Planting Movement Grows.

The annual meeting of the Tree Planting Association was held at the National Arts Club yesterday afternoon. The report of the President showed an extension of the tree-planting movement from one of local to one of National scope, with such a growth in the demand for trees that growers have been unable to keep pace with the association. New plans for the planting of rows of trees at the Delancey Street approach to the Williamsburg Bridge, it was announced, would be carried out in the Spring. The gift of 2,100 flowering cherry trees by the Japanese Government to the City of New York is expected to reach here in time for planting in Central Park and Riverside Drive in the Fall.
